Defense Secrets' Sale Forestalled

Warship Plans Feared Disclosed; Diplomatic Action Possible.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 27.—Col. Thomas Hanley, commanding officer of Mitchel Field, Long Island, threw a heavy guard around the big United States Army air base to prevent any further theft of Air Corps secrets following the arrest of three alleged spies acting for an unnamed European power.

It was stated that "a considerable number" of extra guards in uniform were posted at strategic points at the field, particularly at hangars where the latest models of the Army's fighting planes are housed.

A close check was kept on all visitors to the field, where 1,000 soldiers and 100 officers are stationed.

New Bombsight Guarded.

It was further disclosed that the guard was heavily reinforced around the building where a new and jealously guarded "super" bombsight invention is kept.

The device reputedly would enable American bombers in war time to bomb small-target areas from a height of 20,000 feet with devastating accuracy.

Today's strict precautions at Mitchel Field, a bulwark of New York air defense, came as United States Attorney Lamar Hardy promised swift grand jury action against a red-haired German woman, 26, year-old Johanna Hoffman, and two United States Army soldiers accused of selling military secrets abroad.

The trio, seized by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents Thursday, were arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Isaac Platt and held in $25,000 bond each for grand jury action.

Sale Is Prevented.

Reed Vetterli, the G-man ace who gained promotion to head of the New York bureau through his work on the Lindbergh and Mattson kidnapings, said the arrests came just in time to prevent the sell-out of Panama Canal Zone, Atlantic Seaboard defense and Navy shipyard secrets.

As agents sifted evidence taken from the suspects, it was not immediately known whether the arrests prevented the transmission of secret designs of two supermodern Navy aircraft carriers now under construction.

In addition to Fraulein Hoffman, a native of Dresden, Germany, the Federal agents locked up Gunther Gustave Rumrich, 27, a former United States Army sergeant once stationed in the Panama Canal Zone, and Erich Glaser, a United States Army private stationed at Mitchel Field.

Diplomatic Action Possible.

Glaser was born in Leipzig, Germany. Rumrich was born in the United States but was educated in Germany and lived there many years.

Asked if Germany was the "European power" involved in the alleged plot, United States Attorney Hardy replied:

"You'll have to draw your own inference."

Neither Vetterli nor F. B. I. Chief J. Edgar Hoover at Washington would specify the nation, pending

Six Army 'Air Fortresses' Make Nonstop Dash, Panama to Langley, 2,170 Miles, in 10½ Hours

By the United Press.

The United States will ignore any overtures from Japan to halt the international naval building race, a high Administration official indicated last night.

It was said Japan's recent blunt refusal to divulge her building plans eliminated any possibility of the United States agreeing to a world arms limitation conference, at least until President Roosevelt's expansion program, calling for a 20 per cent increase over treaty limits, got under way.

Would Weaken United States.

Referring to Japanese Foreign Minister Koki Hirota's statement to Parliament Saturday that Japan had no intention of joining a naval race and hoped to "stop such a race by appealing to the powers' sense of fairness and justice," the official said the United States was not in position now to enter an agreement.

It was pointed out that a limitation agreement now might tend to weaken the United States' naval position, assuming that Japan's refusal to announce her program was tantamount to confirming that she was building super-dreadnaughts.

Favors Air Supremacy.

Such an agreement would leave the United States with her present battleship strength plus the Washington and North Carolina, now on the ways, while Japan reportedly has three or four uncompleted dreadnaughts of much greater power than the two this country is building. However, the official said, possibility of a conference a year from now—when the United States is expected to have six battleships under construction, with four being in the neighborhood of 45,000 tons—was much brighter.

Meanwhile, the Congressional conflict over the alleged vulnerability of battleships to aerial attack, re-

Expert Says Japan Has Defeated U. S. In Naval Building

Tokyo (Monday), Feb. 28 (AP).—One of Japan's leading naval authorities, in a magazine article, today declared Japan already has defeated the United States in naval building with the result "America is unable to have anything like confidence in her navy's ability to cope with Japan."

Author of the article is Rear Admiral Tota Ishimaru, retired, who is considered one of Japan's foremost commentators on naval affairs.

He declared the Japanese navy to be superior in quality to the United States fleet now.

The gist of his analysis of the naval situation was that Japan had no need to fear a naval building race and that an actual naval war would be dangerous to Japan only if Great Britain were able to enlist both the United States and Russia in any conflict.

Balkan Entente Seeks Peace, Turk Declares

Ankara, Turkey, Feb. 27 (AP).—Tevfik Rustu Aras, foreign minister of Turkey, declared today, as the four-power Balkan entente closed its fourth annual meeting, that the "entente aspires to become the friendship and peacemaking link between peoples who face a most troublesome and most muddled international situation." Greece, Yugoslavia, Rumania and Turkey comprise the entente.

Good-Will Bombers Complete Last Leg of 12,000-Mile Hop to Buenos Aires and Return; Praised by Woodring.

By the United Press.

Langley Field, Va., Feb. 27.—Six giant United States "flying fortresses," commanded by Lieut. Col. Robert C. Olds on an historic good-will flight to Buenos Aires, completed the last leg of their return journey today, landing at their base here at 5:05 p. m.

Flying in formation, the huge planes circled the field slowly, gliding to a stop of 10 hours and 30 minutes after taking off from France Field, Panama Canal Zone. A large crowd was on hand to greet the 40 fliers.

War Department officials believed today's flight, covering 2,170 miles at an average speed of slightly better than 204 miles an hour, established a new record for military planes of this type.

"Best Planes Built."

Olds, smiling broadly, told interviewers the planes "came up to all expectations—undoubtedly the best flying machines ever built."

"It was a wonderful flight," he said. "We were treated marvelously all along the flight route. The cordiality was tremendous wherever we stopped.

"It was one of the most marvelous experiences that anyone could ever hope to have."

He praised the morale of the men

Farmers Face Subsidy Cuts on Excess Acreage

Penalties for Overplanting Several Times Amount of Bonuses.

By the Associated Press.

Farmers who harvest more than their allotted acreage of major crops face drastic deductions in Federal subsidy payments under the new farm program, officials disclosed yesterday.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration announced detailed regulations governing payment of benefits from $55,000,000 Congress is authorized to appropriate for financing the new crop control law.

Crops affected are cotton, corn, wheat, tobacco, rice, potatoes, peanuts and others designated officially as "soil-depleting."

To Control Production.

The new farm act authorizes payment of subsidies to growers who divert land from these crops to those which improve the soil and who use other practices the AAA says are soil-building.

In announcing the regulations, J. B. Hutson, assistant AAA Administrator, said the subsidy or "soil-conservation" phase of the farm program was designed to do more than improve and maintain soil fertility. He said "it will tend to keep production in line" with crop requirements.

Other provisions of the new act authorize use of a marketing quota system, when approved by two-thirds of the growers voting in referenda, to keep surplus supplies off the market.

Under terms of the subsidy program wheat growers, for example, will be paid at the rate of 12 cents

Wright Is Freed, Hunts For Peace in Obscurity

Los Angeles, Feb. 27 (AP).—Paul A. Wright walked out of the county jail into a pelting rain and freedom today as California's courts closed the books on the bizarre "shock killings" of his wife and friend, John Kimmel.

"If it is humanly possible, the public will never hear of Paul Wright again," he said as his attorney, Jerry Giesler, led him from the jail through the downpour to a waiting automobile.

Gustave Le Rouge Dies.

Paris, Feb. 7 (AP).—Gustave Le Rouge, 70, novelist, playwright, composer and historian, died yesterday at his Paris home. At the turn of the century he was one of the leaders of the Latin Quarter literary group, associated with Paul Verlaine, the "prince of poets."

Gen. Pershing Weakens but Fights to Live

Doctors More Hopeful as Veteran 'Seems to Be Better.'

War Hero Still Can't Eat; Near Death Since Thursday.

By the Associated Press.

Tucson, Ariz., Feb. 27.—A determination to live kept Gen. John J. Pershing on the upgrade tonight and his physicians announced they were more hopeful for the wartime commander who has lingered near death since Thursday.

A late bulletin from the sick room said the general was weaker and still unable to swallow, but that in some ways he "seems better." His pulse was regular and "competent."

"He has had larger periods of consciousness and we have obtained a slight increase in kidney function," said the bulletin. "However, he appears weaker and his blood pressure is somewhat lower."

Still Has Temperature.

The bulletin released by Dr. Roland Davison, Pershing's private physician, and Lieut. Col. S. U. Marietta, said the general continued to run a temperature.

"Rheumatism is not a problem now. He is not able to swallow yet," said the announcement. Then it concluded with the note:

"We are more hopeful tonight than we were last night."

Dr. Davison was asked if he meant to convey the thought the general might recover. He replied:

"As to his getting well, I am not so sure about that."

Heart Is Damaged.

He elaborated further on the bulletin:

"The encouraging signs are the strength of the general's heart and, although it is badly damaged, it still is pounding away regularly.

"If we could get him to swallow some food during his periods of consciousness and get his kidneys to function, we would feel really hopeful of pulling him through."

Dr. Davison then asserted:

"Any person other than Gen. Pershing, with his physique, would have been dead three days ago."

The bulletin contained no report on the condition of the blood which since last midnight had shown evidence of uremic poisoning of "considerable magnitude."

An afternoon release said this situation continued in conflict with evidence of clinical improvement.

Same Treatment.

Several times during the last four days the physicians have given up hope and said the commander could not last much longer, but his fighting heart has brought him through each crisis.

The doctors said they would pursue the same type of treatment as has been administered the last four days. This includes heart stimulants, sometimes a ministration of oxygen, and intravenous injections of nutriment.

Sergt. C. C. Shaeffer, Gen. Pershing's orderly and devoted friend for 17 years, found encouragement in the last bulletin.

After a visit to the bedside, he said:

"You know, I think the general is going to live now."

Despite a three weeks' assault of high blood pressure on damaged heart muscles, Pershing greeted Dr. Davison by name this morning and recognized his sister, May Pershing, when she entered the sick room at dawn.

King Carol Signs New Constitution For Rumanians

After him signed Premier Miron Cristea, patriarch of the Orthodox Church, and members of the government. Diplomats, army officers and members of the supreme court witnessed the ceremony.

Declaring it was "time for less politics and more hard work," King Carol pledged defense of the constitution which centers greater authority in the crown and limits, but does not prohibit, political parties.

Festivities throughout the capital celebrated the signing.

Traffic Deaths Drop 30 Per Cent In January; Maryland Mark Best

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—A drop of 30 per cent in United States traffic fatalities during January was reported today by the National Safety Council, which termed this "an encouraging start for 1938."

"Five hundred and fifty lives were saved in January as compared with the January total a year ago," the council's report said.

The decline in January was 33 per cent below December and 17 per cent below January, 1937.

The council, which estimated 1937 motor vehicle deaths at 39,700, reported 2,710 traffic fatalities for last January, compared with 3,260 in January, 1937, and 3,590 in December, 1937.

"January was the third successive month to show a sizable reduction in traffic deaths from the corresponding month of the previous year," the report stated.

"The cumulative saving in the three-month period was approximately 1,400 lives."

The council did not venture to attribute the decline to any one factor, commenting that whether the January drop was due in part to reduced travel "cannot yet be" determined, since gasoline consumption figures are not yet available for January."

"Records for November and December last year do show, however, that the fatality reductions in those months—10 per cent in each case—were achieved without a decline in motor vehicle mileage as compared with the same month of the previous year," it added.

Of the 36 States reporting for January, 1937, Maryland had the greatest percentage drop—46 per cent. A decrease of 25 per cent was reported by Virginia.

Reds to Hold New 'Show Trial;' Charge Gorky Was Murdered

By the United Press.

Moscow, Feb. 27.—The government tonight announced that a public "show trial" will start Wednesday of 21 prominent former officials on charges ranging from the "assassination" of Maxim Gorky, famous author, to a 17-year-old plot to kill Dictator Josef Stalin and the late Nicolai Lenin.

Among defendants are several prominent physicians charged with conspiracy "resulting in the death" on June 12, 1936, of Gorky, most famous of contemporary Russian authors and personal friend of Stalin.

It was the first time there had been any suggestion of foul play in the death of the 68-year-old dean of Soviet letters who died in the house where Lenin died, of what was then described as grip and lung trouble.

50,000 Held Ready to Arouse Provinces in Move on Capital.

Moderation Asked By Seyss-Inquart

Many Demonstrators Go Home but Pro-Reich Spirit Persists.

By the Associated Press.

Graz, Austria, Feb. 27.—The Austrian army ringed this Nazi stronghold tonight to thwart a Nazi effort to seize control of the metropolis of Styria and march on Vienna.

Bombers and pursuit planes maneuvered overhead while machine-gun detachments guarded the roads into the city 90 miles southwest of Vienna.

The garrison was reinforced by three companies rushed from Vienna. At the nearby village of Goesting light field artillery batteries were implaced, ready for any eventuality. Sixteen tanks rolled into Graz to reinforce defense measures.

Special police from Vienna and gendarmes imported from other communities patrolled the streets, mingling with crowds of shouting Nazis whose common greeting was a ringing:

"Heil Hitler!"

No More Concessions.

Armin Dardieu, a local Nazi leader, said 50,000 men were ready to start on Vienna from Graz and would be joined by 5,000 from Leoben, 5,000 from Leibnitz, 2,000 from Liezf and smaller units from dozens of villages throughout the province of Styria.

Federal troops in the Graz garrison were under arms ready for instant call.

In the upper part of the province, nearer Vienna, garrisons were strengthened and units shifted to strategic points.

The government apparently was determined on no more concessions to Nazis and was prepared to go to any length necessary to halt the Nazi march or the seizure of the province the more radical Nazis were advocating.

Leaders Urge Restraint.

Nazi leaders were understood to be on their way to Graz from Vienna to counsel restraint. Arthur Seyss-Inquart, minister of the interior and friend of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler of Germany, was said to have advised against excesses.

It was the appointment of Seyss-Inquart and other Nazis to the cabinet after Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's February 12 conference with Hitler that spurred the outlawed Nazis to renewed hope for control of Austria and eventual union with Germany.

Schuschnigg's reaffirmation of Austrian independence in his speech to parliament Thursday, however, infuriated the Nazis, particularly in Styria, where their greatest strength lies.

The local hero was Mayor Hans Schmid, who was ordered to take a vacation because he permitted the hoisting of the swastika flag of the Nazis on the city hall while Schuschnigg was speaking.

Nazis claim that 82 per cent of Styrian federal and local officials are Nazis; it seemed that at least 80

Enemies Admit Reorganization Bill Will Pass

Party Lines to Vanish in Battle Opening Today in the Senate.

By the Associated Press.

Supporters and opponents of legislation to reorganize Government agencies yesterday predicted a sharp division cutting across party lines when the proposal is taken up in the Senate today.

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, chairman of the special committee which drafted the bill to give the President power to realign a large share of the 135 governmental boards and bureaus, predicted final passage of the measure with its "important features" preserved.

Strong Fight to Amend.

Senator McNary, of Oregon, minority leader, said he would oppose the bill, but saw little chance of defeating it. He predicted a strong fight would be made to amend it materially.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, observed that "time will tell whether we have enough votes to amend the bill." He is fighting a provision which would abolish the Comptroller General's office and divide his duties between a new official—an auditor general—and the director of the budget.

Opponents of the measure revealed they had formed a loose-knit organization which is expected to stand together on certain proposed amendments. They said their group included several Senators who fought President Roosevelt's attempt to reorganize the Supreme Court, as well as some who were on the other side of that issue.

Some Haven't Read It.

Amendments have been offered by Senators Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana; Borah (Republican), of Idaho; Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska; Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts; Clark (Democrat), of Missouri; Bulow (Democrat), of South Dakota; Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina; O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, and Byrd. O'Mahoney, a member of the Byrnes committee, said he would support the proposal, but wished to add "clarifying" amendments.

More than a dozen Senators declared they had not read the bill and would not decide how to vote until they had heard it explained.

Cardozo Convalescing, Is Able to Sit Up Daily

Benjamin N. Cardozo, associate justice of the Supreme Court, who has been ill since early December, now is in the convalescent stage, physicians declared yesterday.

"The justice is able to sit up each day and is making steady progress," it was said. "He is in good spirits and often speaks of his work and of his fellow justices." Cardozo was visited last week by Chief Justice Hughes and Associate Justice Stone. Both left "encouraged by his general appearance after so prolonged an illness," the doctors reported.

10,000 London Reds March on Italian Embassy

Protest Chamberlain's Surrender to 'Threats' of Duce.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 27.—Ten thousand clamorous demonstrators marched on the Italian Embassy today, bearing a resolution condemning what was termed Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's "surrendering to Italian threats."

The London Communist Party organized the mass demonstration in Trafalgar square. From there the Communists and sympathizers wended their way to the edge of Grosvenor square to deliver their resolution to Ambassador Dino Grandi.

The resolution declared the policy of "assisting Fascist aggression would not be tolerated." It also condemned "Italian intervention in Spain."

The throng was halted short of the embassy by a wall of mounted police and but two of the number were permitted to approach the entrance.

They rang the ambassador's doorbell but there was no response. So they slipped the resolution under

Soviet and U. S. Map New Search For 7 Russians

By the Associated Press.

Airplane rescue squadrons from both American and Russian sides of the "top of the world" are scheduled to renew efforts, in the polar twilight of March, to find Sigismund Levanefsky, lost Soviet polar flier.

The rescue squadrons are headed on the American side by Sir Hubert Wilkins, famed explorer, and on the Russian side by Ivan Chuvanoffsky, crack Russian air scientist.

Both squadrons were handicapped in the last three months by cloudy weather which hid the Arctic moon. They had counted on its rays to help them scan thousands of miles of ice in search of Levanefsky and the six companions who disappeared with him August 13, 1937, after crossing the pole on the way from Moscow to the United States.

Railroads Wait I. C. C. Decision On Rate Boost

Ruling Is Expected Early This Week; Forced Mergers to Be Urged.

By the Associated Press.

Railroads today were awaiting an Interstate Commerce Commission decision on their petition for a general freight rate increase of 15 per cent, expected to be handed down early this week, and at the same time were preparing proposals to be submitted at a White House conference soon afterward.

Proposals tending to accelerate consolidations are expected to figure prominently in the discussions with President Roosevelt, and some suggestions to that end are expected to be advanced when the commission hands down its decision on the rate-increase plea.

Forced Mergers.

Forced merger of some systems was said to be embodied in one proposal to be submitted to Mr. Roosevelt, although members of the commission were said to be divided in their opinions as to the best ways of saving the $26,000,000,000 industry. The new rates would boost the carriers' revenues by $517,000,000 a year, but the roads, contending they face widespread bankruptcy, maintain the added rates would no more than meet the rising costs of operation. Railroad interest charges in 1936 amounted to $667,000,000.

Federal incorporation of railroads and co-ordination of traffic facilities also have been considered by some of those invited to the forthcoming White House conference.

Recommendations have been drawn up by Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce; the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Interstate Commerce Commission and some of the carriers themselves.

The President invited these groups as well as representatives of other governmental agencies and the financial world to talk over with him a situation which has plunged a third of the Nation's railroad mileage into bankruptcy and put nearly another third into serious financial difficulties.

Some observers believed the RFC, major creditor of many of the roads, would concentrate on methods of refinancing insolvent or endangered lines.

Senator Wheeler predicted that suggestions advanced at President Roosevelt's conference would be consolidated in a unified proposal to avoid Government management or ownership of the carriers. He indicated, however, there seemed little hope for any substantial action at this session of Congress.

Investigation of Year.

For more than a year the Montana Senator has conducted an investigation of railroad finances. He proposes to require Federal incorporation of railroads as a foundation for more effective control.

Wheeler declared revision of the law covering railroad reorganizations, to simplify and speed up the procedure, was most important. He said he favored a reduction of railroad debt structures to "prevent going into bankruptcy every time a Hoover depression or a Democratic recession" developed.

"There ought to be legislation to divorce the railroads from banker control," he asserted. "Two big banking houses—J. P. Morgan and Kuhn, Loeb & Co.—have had a monopoly of the railroad business. When a railroad has bonds to sell they ought to be offered to the best bidder."

Tenant Farmers Back Labor Board

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 27 (AP).—The Southern tenant farmers adopted a resolution today urging that the national labor relations act be extended to cover all types of agricultural labor.

The delegates, a majority of whom were colored, re-elected J. R. Butler, Pangburn, Ark., president for a third term.

A long resolution designated as the union's 1938 program proposed that the Federal Government establish co-operative farm projects to provide a means of living for people who "by circumstances beyond their control constitute a menace to the welfare and well-being of the employed industrial population as well as the person still finding employment on the soil."

Coughlin Demands Labor Be Christian

Detroit, Feb. 27 (AP).—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Royal Oak, Mich., priest, said today that both capitalism and communism "concentrate wealth in the hands of commissars—commissars of politics or commissars of finance."

Replying in a broadcast address to a correspondent who suggested that laborers "organize a political party for labor and take things into our own hands," Father Coughlin said:

"My voice will never be raised in campaigning for a labor party or for any other party until I am assured that the leaders of a proposed party not only pledge themselves to the principles of Christianity but prove themselves first by practicing these principles."

No Wonder You Are Constipated!

What do you eat for breakfast? Coffee, toast, maybe some eggs? What do you eat for lunch and dinner? Bread, meat, potatoes? No wonder you're constipated—due to lack of "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean the amount you eat. It means the kind of food that forms a soft, bulky mass in the bowels. It's this mass that helps your bowels move.

The common sense thing to do about it is to eat a natural laxative food. Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast will give you just the "bulk" you need. And it gives you, in addition, Nature's great intestinal-tonic, vitamin B1. Eat this crunchy toasted cereal every day, drink plenty of water, and life will be brighter for you! All-Bran is made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

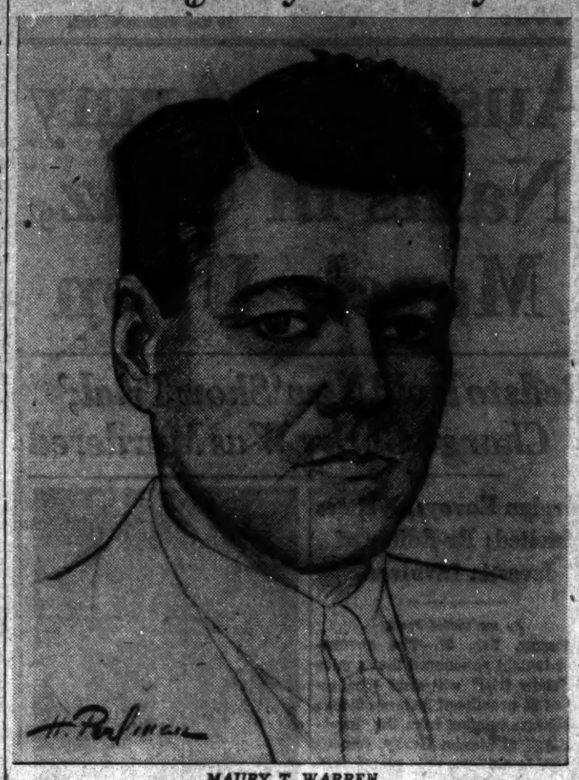
Washington Highlands Group Seeks Highway Into Maryland



MAURY T. WARREN.

By Christine Sadler

A four-lane highway through their section to the District line, giving them an exit into Maryland to compare with other roads leading out of Washington, is one of the objectives of members of the Washington Highlands Citizens Association.

Washington Highlands includes the area of the southeast from Congress Heights "on to the line," takes in the new suburb known as Bolling View, and is recognized as one of the outposts of the District.

The civic outlook of the vicinity is considerably brighter now that money has been appropriated for the big Oxon Run sewer, the first link of which will be built to serve Washington Highlands.

"Water has been our main problem. We have to go to the street to get it at the present time. Then in time of floods we have had too much. Parts of our section have been flooded three times this winter so deeply that families have had to move out. Although the sewer will not prevent the floods, it will better health conditions which exist during floods," Maury T. Warren, president of the association, said.

Like most parts of the southeast ern parts of the District Washington Highlands is growing rapidly despite its lack of some of the "modern conveniences." During the last two years, Warren estimates, at least 100 new homes have been built there.

In addition to the four-lane highway, the associatoin is on record in favor of a bridge across the river at South Capitol street, a school and playground, flood control, and local suffrage.

"We realize that the bridge may be a long time coming, but we are beginning to advocate it. We have no school in our area and we think we need one. The playground we would like to have developed in connection with the school," Warren said.

His association has been organized for around 12 years and has approximately 60 paid-up members, which is a good percentage considering the population of the area. Members meet in various homes and are enthusiastic civic workers. They have been responsible for numerous street openings and paving projects.

A native of Virginia, Warren has lived in the District for ten years. He is connected with the mechanical department of St. Elizabeths Hospital and, in addition to his civic work, belongs to a number of fraternal organizations, including the American Legion. He is a delegate to the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations, has a wife and two children, and "tinkers with the guitar a bit."

On Wednesday—Vincent B. Norelli, of the Pharmacists Society of the District of Columbia, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

U. S. Provides for Mobilization Of 1,230,000 in Four Months

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

The War Department has completed mobilization plans under which 1,230,000 troops could be placed in the field within four months, while private industry would swing into immediate action to supply guns, munitions, food, clothing and other necessary war paraphernalia, it was learned last night.

The plans were drawn by the Army general staff and are based on years of study of war-time strategy, particularly that developed after the United States was drawn into the World War. Details are being guraded to prevent "leaks" to foreign powers.

The program embraces 10,000 industrial plants which have secret agreements with the War Department and which overnight can be transformed into important supply depots. They were selected from among 20,000 plants canvassed to determine what specific tasks they could perform in the event of war.

Two Plans Included.

Two methods of recruiting troops are included in the plan. One provides universal conscription. The other calls for creation of citizens' committees which, in co-operation with 16,000 American Legion posts, would campaign for volunteers.

While these recruits were being enlisted, the War Department would thrust 300,000 Regular Army and reserve forces into the field as shock troops. Further calls on both units can boost the total to 600,000 in 30 days, and, with the new recruits, to 1,230,000 within four months.

The plan does not contemplate Government operation of the industrial plants. Military officials are said to feel that private operation under Federal supervision is more efficient because there would be less chance of a breakdown in the economic structure. This difficulty arose during the World War, with disastrous effects on some supplies.

Reserve Supply Asked.

In addition to what the mobilization plan calls for, Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson last night advocated a program that would keep a six-month supply of reserve equipment on hand at all times.

"That means," he said, "that we should always have an adequate supply of guns, anti-tank and anti-aircraft guns and light and heavy artillery, together with all types of ammunition, long-range guns, gas masks, airplanes, and other equipment necessary to maintain an efficient war.

The former commander of the American Legion emphasized that he hoped the United States would never have to utilize its preparedness program, but pointed out that President Roosevelt had called for steps in this direction in his recent national defense message. He said Congress also should take cognizance of the need for modernizing seacoast and harbor defenses, hasten expansion of the air corps, and enact the administration bill to create an organized reserve of 150,000 former soldiers.

Income Returns Of 6,000,000 Due in 2 Weeks

More Than Half to Be Filed by People Who Won't Have to Pay.

By the Associated Press.

Employes of the Federal Internal Revenue Bureau expect 6,000,000 income tax returns to pile onto their desks between now and the deadline for filing, midnight March 15.

A return must be filed by everyone, married or single, who has a gross income of $5,000 a year or more. A return also is required of single persons having net income of $1,000 or more and married persons having net income of $2,500 or more. These returns are necessary regardless of whether they show a tax payment must be made.

Determining gross income is the first step in making out a return. The tax return blank has spaces for listing such items as salaries, fees, dividends and business profits, interest and other forms of income. Only a few items are exempt from this listing. They include salaries from State or other non-Federal governmental agencies, certain payments on matured insurance policies, gifts, Federal veterans' pensions and interest on Government securities.

Don't Miss Deductions.

Next, the taxpayer must find his "net income" by taking his deductions. Deductions are allowed for contributions for charitable or educational purposes, interest paid on debts, taxes paid, canceled bad debts owed to the taxpayer, uninsured losses from fires and similar disasters, and business expenses.

Deduction for taxes paid may be taken, however, only when the law imposes the tax directly upon a person. For instance, in some States sales taxes are added onto the price of the goods and thus actually paid by consumers, but the tax technically is levied on the merchant and may be deducted only by him. In other States, law makes merchants mere collectors and consumers can claim the deduction. An exception is that social security taxes cannot be deducted by employes but can by employers.

Among deductible business expenses are office rent and transportation. If an automobile is used for both business and pleasure purposes, only a proportionate share of the car's cost of operation may be claimed as a business expense.

After the "net income" is determined, a personal credit is deductible. For a single person this is $1,000 and for married persons or heads of families, $2,500.

Pay by Installments.

An additional credit of $400 may be taken for each dependent who is under 18 or incapable physically or mentally of supporting himself. A single man supporting an aged mother in his own home, for instance, may claim a $2,500 credit as head of a family and $400 for one dependent.

To determine the amount upon which the "normal" income tax of 4 per cent must be paid, the net income is reduced by 10 per cent. This is what is called an "earned-income" credit.

Persons whose net income is more than $4,000 have to pay a surtax, which ranges from 4 per cent on that portion of net income between $4,000 and $6,000, to 75 per cent on any portion above $5,000,000.

Finally comes the problem of paying the tax. If you can't pay it in full by March 15, the Government will let you meet the levy on the installment plan. This calls for quarterly payments, beginning March 15.

Florida Asks RFC Change Lawyers

Belle Grade, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP).—H. H. Wedgeworth, president, today said directors of the South Florida Conservancy Improvement Association had sent a telegram to Chairman Jesse Jones, at Washington, asking the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to change attorneys representing it in foreclosure proceedings in the district.

"The United States Sugar Corporation is propably the largest client of these attorneys and it is vitally interested in this foreclosure program," he said the RFC chairman was told.

"The RFC has loans on practically all drained areas in the Everglades, 90 per cent of which land is now in cultivation. It appears to us that the attorneys, by feeding the sugar company ideas to the RFC, are shaping the ideas of the RFC in its foreclosure program in the South Florida conservancy district, apparently using the RFC in clearing titles to lands which they will later acquire."

Weir and Hook to Be Called In Senate's Labor Hearings

Activities of Employers' Associations and Citizens' Committees Will Be Put Under Spotlight, Says La Follette.

Activities of employers' associations and citizens' committees in the general field of labor relations will be put under the spotlight when the Senate Civil Liberties Committee opens its next series of hearings at 10 a. m., Wednesday, Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., chairman, announced yesterday.

The committee has made preparations to sit for at least two weeks in a continuation of surveys begun last year, such as that conducted with respect to the National Metal Trades Association in January, 1937.

For the first three days, officers of the National Association of Manufacturers will give testimony concerning the association's activities in the general field of industrial relations. The witnesses will include Charles R. Hook, president of the association and of the American Rolling Mills; Ernest T. Weir, steel magnate; Walter B. Weisenburger, executive vice president of the association, and Noel Sargent, association secretary.

Beginning March 7 the committee will take testimony concerning activities of the special conference committee, an organization of industrial relations' directors of 12 of the biggest corporations in the country. Among the witnesses will be J. M. Larkin, chairman of the committee and vice president of the Bethlehem Steel Co., and E. S. Cowdrick, executive secretary of the conference commmittee.

Later that week the committee will take testimony concerning the Johnstown Citizens Committee and allied organizations active in the recent labor dispute during the "Little Steel" strike last summer.

Meanwhile the manufacturers' association announced yesterday appointment of a national committee to study methods of improving industrial working conditions. Hook said the committee would be headed by Frank Purnell, president of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. H. C. Beaver, president of the Worthington Pump & Machinery Corporation, Harrison, N. J., will be vice chairman.

The study will include such subjects as plant medical services, sanitation, lighting, heating, ventilation and safety.

$47,764 Donated In Campaign for Symphony Funds

A force of 800 volunteer workers already has collected $47,764 for the sustaining fund to assure the 1938-39 season of the National Symphony Orchestra, it was announced yesterday. The quota set for the drive, which concludes March 6, is $100,000.

Edward Goring Bliss, chairman of the men's business committee for the campaign, will preside at today's report meeting, to be held at 12:30 p. m. in the Carlton Hotel.

Executives of Washington newspapers and radio stations will be honor guests at the luncheon in recognition of their assistance in bringing the symphony association's message before the public.

Rep. Ramspeck to Speak Before Women's Forum

Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, will be one of three speakers tonight at 1500 Rhode Island avenue northwest at the monthly forum of the Women's Democratic National Council. The subject will be the effect of the reorganization bill on the civil service, and other speakers expected are Paul P. David and Elliott Kaplan, secretary of the National Civil Service Reform League.

Mrs. Marion Ramsey, legislative chairman of the council, said a panel discussion and a discussion from the floor would follow the addresses.

NO SWAN SONG . . .

EVEN though the tailour of a hundred years ago is no more, his counterpart is found in the designer of today. And so it is that the tradition of fine tailouring is carried on in the Hickey-Freeman organization, with the designer as the apex of a triangle which has for its sides the weaver who creates the fabrics, the tailour who gives them life, and the man who sells and guarantees the clothes. Speedy machine methods have in many cases replaced the slow craftsman—but not so with Hickey-Freeman. The swan song of the patient hand needler is yet to be sung.

Thugs Hold Up Filling Station, Doctor, Woman

Same Bandit Pair Collects at Gunpoint in Three Sunday Robberies.

Three holdups were staged early yesterday morning, each by two colored bandits. Total cash involved was $52.

The men, one carrying a gun, took $16 from the station cash register and King's change carrier about 3:30 a. m. and escaped in a dark-bodied automobile.

Less than 15 minutes later, two men answering the description of King's assailants held up Dr. Harry Smith and his wife while they were putting their car in a garage in the rear of their home, 1622 Argonne place northwest.

Dr. Smith said one of them entered the garage with a gun while the other waited in an automobile. They took his billfold containing $20.

Third victim of the same pair of highwaymen was Mrs. Mary E. Smith, 3145 Mount Pleasant street northwest, who was held up in the 3000 block of Fifteenth street northwest.

Mrs. Smith was walking to her home from the telephone exchange at Fourteenth street and Columbia road, when she was accosted by an armed colored man. He took her pocketbook which contained $16, a wedding ring and a bank book.

Oyster Shipment By Air to Hawaii Caps Embryo War

This looks like pre-election propaganda, but there may be something to it anyway.

Comes a statement from the Pennsylvania-Central Airlines Corporation announcing that it is shipping 200 select Chesapeake Bay oysters from Baltimore to Honolulu to grace a homesick Baltimorean's banquet table.

What makes the item sound like propaganda is the fact that it follows suspiciously close on the heels of a previous announcement relating to a contest between Chesapeake Bay and Narragansett Bay bivalves. The contest is to be held tomorrow in the Senate restaurant, with Senators to eat and to judge.

If this be propaganda, make the most of it, Rhode Island! One way to combat the strategy might be to send a case of de luxe Narragansett oysters to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

'No Good After 60,' Senate Doorman Commits Suicide

Shortly after discussing the illness of Gen. Pershing and remarking that "after a man reaches 60 he isn't much good," Virgil Healy, 65, doorkeeper at the main entrance to the Senate for 20 years, was found shot to death yesterday in the basement of his home at 215 Third street northwest.

Healy's .38-caliber service revolver with one cartridge fired was found on the floor near his body. After seeing the body, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said a certificate of suicide would be issued.

A native of Virginia, Healy was a familiar figure around Senate corridors and during his 20 years' service became acquainted with scores of Senators. His cheerful smile and pleasant manner made him many close friends among the high legislators and few of them entered the Senate chambers without stopping to chat with Healy.

Mrs. Catherine McIllvain, manager of the rooming house where Healy lived, notified police when she investigated a shot fired in the basement and discovered Healy lying on the floor. Mrs. McIllvain said Healy had complained of a heart ailment recently.

D. C. Police Seize New Yorker As He Leaves Virginia Prison

Fugitive, Jailed in Roanoke on Bad Check Charge, Is Wanted Here for Similar Offense; Goes to Baltimore Next.

Louis E. McGowan, 42, fugitive from New York City, is on his way back, but at the present rate he will be the next ten years reaching his destination.

McGowan, according to police, left New York more than four years ago with several hundred checks issued by the Public National Bank. The checks, with the signature of the vice president of the bank on them, began to show up in almost every town south of Manhattan.

In Roanoke, Va., McGowan was arrested and sent to a road camp at Tazewell, Va., for eight years. Serving four years, he was released Saturday on good behavior, only to walk out of the institution into the arms of local detectives.

Detective Sergts. Herbert Wanamaker and Charles Warder, of Washington, had waited the four years to arrest McGowan on a charge involving a $10 bad check. Brought here yesterday morning, the man faces possible sentence of from one to ten years.

After making restitution here, McGowan will be turned over to Baltimore, where a detainer is against him also. Records show he has been in trouble with police since he was 20. He once served three years in Leavenworth for carrying liquor on an Indian reservation.

Second Annual Stamp Exhibit on Tomorrow

The second annual stamp exhibition of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., will open tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock at the National Museum, Constitution avenue and Tenth street. More than 250 frames of United States and foreign stamps will be on view. The exhibition is non-competitive and will be open to the public daily until 4:30 o'clock.

On Thursday at 8 p. m. there will be a reception, when officials of the Government and members of the diplomatic corps have been invited to view the exhibit.

Concert Tonight By D.C. Symphony

With Hans Kindler as expositor and conductor, the National Symphony Orchestra will present the third and last "Children's Concert for Adults" in Roosevelt High School at 8:30 tonight under the joint sponsorship of the music committee of the Junior Board of Commerce and the Community Center Department.

In his opening talk, Dr. Kindler will bring his sketch of the development of music down to the present day. The program will consist of selections designed to illustrate the various forms and patterns of musical writing. The series of concerts is an experiment here in the field of music appreciation, and the attendance thus far has justified the expectations of the sponsors.

Chest Forum to Hear Dr. Perkins on Relief

Members of the Federal Community Chest Forum will listen to a discussion of "A Factual Exposition of the District's Relief Problem," by Dr. Frederic W. Perkins, tomorrow at 12:30 at 1423 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Dr. Perkins, who is pastor of the National Universalist Church and president of the Family Service Association, has been associated with private and public welfare organizations here.

2 Held as Wife Nears Death of Mystery Blow

Husband and Friend Are Picked Up When She Is Found Unconscious.

Police were holding two men last night as they sought to unravel a mystery surrounding a well-dressed, 40-year-old woman who was near death as Casualty Hospital from a brain injury.

One of the men, police said, was the woman's husband, the other a "friend."

The latter, they said, accompanied the woman to a rooming house in the 900 block of K street northwest Saturday night. At 7 a. m. yesterday the man, nervous and excited, appeared at the door of the landlady and said:

"Get an ambulance quickly. I'm going, but I'll be back."

With the arrival of the ambulance, Dr. Frank Braden and the landlady found the woman, who had arrived the night before, sprawled on a bed, unconscious. At Casualty Hospital it was said later that she was suffering from a cerebral hemorrhage or concussion.

Detective Sergeant Jerry Flaherty later found the man who had escorted her to the rooming house. The man said the woman had become ill and that he had attended her during the night. When she failed to rally, he said, he told the landlady to call the ambulance and then went to his own home.

Flaherty interviewed neighbors of the woman and learned that she and her husband had quarreled Friday night. On the theory that the brain injury might have been suffered then, Flaherty arrested the husband and held him, along with the "friend," for questioning.

Denationalization Impossible, Czech Envoy Tells Nazis

Angouleme, France, Feb. 27 (AP). Stefan Osusky, Czechoslovakian Minister to France, declared today that nations of Central Europe could not be "denationalized."

As a guest of honor of this municipality, Osusky spoke of Franz von Papen's disclosure that Reichsfuehrer Hitler envisages a commonwealth of nations in Central Europe under German direction.

(Von Papen made the statement recently in Vienna before he quit his post as German Ambassador to Austria.)

"If this plan represents the realization of Germany's interests as a neighbor state in Central Europe and as a great power," the Czech envoy said, in part, "it must not be forgotten that it has been proved that the nations of Central Europe cannot now be denationalized.

"New generations have grown since the war and are now definitely Czechoslovakian, Rumanian and Yugoslavian."

Man Shooting Gun At Wall Hits Self

Joseph Sigmon, 25, 1151 North Capitol street, was in Garfield Hospital with a bullet wound in the upper right leg, said by police to have been accidentally self-inflicted.

Sigmon was taken to the hospital from a filling station at 2270 Sherman avenue northwest where the shooting occurred. Doctors said the bullet had entered his groin, but that his condition was good.

Police took into custody at time of the shooting a man and a woman who were with Sigmon. They were released after being questioned.

Sigmon said he had fired two shots from a .22-caliber revolver into the wall of the filling station. A third shot entered his leg.

Premier Warns Paris to Settle Internal Strife

Chautemps Tells Senate He Must Be Free to Deal With Dictators.

By the United Press.

Paris, Feb. 27.—Premier Camille Chautemps threatened to resign tonight, less than 24 hours after obtaining an almost unanimous vote of confidence on foreign policy, unless the nation patches up its internal affairs to enable forceful handling of France's relations with the dictators.

In a message to the Senate Chautemps warned he could not remain in power more than 15 days unless the conciliation and arbitration section of the new labor code is enacted immediately in Parliament to quell industrial unrest.

More than 7,000 collective labor contracts expire Monday, he said, and the new code must be voted speedily or a wave of labor troubles will break out and almost certainly force his downfall.

Chautemps promised that employers' rights of hiring and firing would remain intact, but that compulsory arbitration would be imposed.

The Senate adopted the labor measure soon after receiving Chautemps' message, and sent it to the Chamber of Deputies.

As result of his 439-to-2 vote of confidence early today the premier sent word to London that France is ready to "consider" any agreement reached by Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and Premier Mussolini of Italy.

Chautemps made it clear, however, that France is not so eager to be pulled into any conversations with Fuehrer Hitler of Germany and, for the sake of domestic tranquillity, would like to have any negotiations along the lines of a four-power Locarno — Britain, France, Germany and Italy—delayed for a time.

Position of U. S. On Its Nationals Satisfies Tokyo

Tokyo, Feb. 27 (AP).—The foreign office spokesman said today Japan considers the position taken by the United States with regard to its nationals in China as "perfectly satisfactory."

Referring to the American reply to a Japanese request that third powers take precautions to protect their nationals in the Chinese-Japanese war, the spokesman said:

"The United States took the position that a legal obligation for foreign nations in China to mark their property does not exist.

"However, the United States said it might warn nationals to take precautions on their own initiative. This position is perfectly satisfactory to Japan. It was what Japan wanted.

"The whole question is merely a matter of finding some method to protect foreign nationals in China. The army is interested in protecting foreign lives and property."

Teachers Hold Poorer Schools Need Most Aid

Atlantic City, N. J., Feb. 27 (AP).—The National Education Association's committee on legislation tonight went on record as favoring distribution of any Federal school funds on the basis of State needs rather than on a strict basis of school population.

Like President Roosevelt's advisory committee on education, the N. E. A.'s legislative committee, empowered to speak for the entire organization on this subject, believes poorer States should receive a larger share of aid than more well-to-do States.

Hunt Turns to Scotland For Lost Mystery Ship

London, Feb. 27 (AP).—Royal air force planes today resumed search for Britain's missing mystery plane on receipt of a report that wreckage had been seen in the Cheviot Hills, near Langholm, on Scotland's southern border.

The mystery plane, a specially built bomber, one of three designed for a world's nonstop record attempt, vanished on a practice flight around the British Isles last Thursday. In it were two flying officers and a sergeant.

3 Italian Fliers Found Down in Libyan Desert

Cufra, Libya, Feb. 27 (AP).—Marshal Italo Balbo, governor of Libya, reported today he had found the Italian aviator, Count Franco Mazzoti, who, with two companions, had been missing in the Libyan desert three days. The fliers were unharmed. They were forced down 120 miles from this desert oasis while flying from Hon in an air derby.

Chiang's Planes Rout Enemy; Shoot Down Observation Bag

Japanese Troops Dispersed Along Banks of Yellow River.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Feb. 27.—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's invigorated air force was reported today to have broken up Japanese troop concentrations on the north bank of the Yellow River.

The bombardment further slowed up the vast southward offensive of Japanese armies against the Lunghai Railway corridor through central China.

One Chinese attack plane was said to have shot down a captive balloon from which observers were directing Japanese artillery fire near Mengsien, on the northern bank of the river, in northwestern Honan province.

Elsewhere Chinese bombs were dispersing Japanese along the river, which in Honan province parallels the vital railway from which 400,000 Chinese have held off several divisions of Japanese both from the north and south for weeks.

Last week's Chinese counter-attacks virtually halted the whole offensive and in some sectors actually rolled the attackers back. Opposed forces on the north bank of the river feinted at each other today without a major encounter.

Mme. Chiang Resigns.

Hankow, Feb. 27 (AP).—After two years of directing her husband's air force, Mme. Chiang Kai-shek is understood to be relinquishing the position.

The strain of her wartime duties is known to have heavily taxed her health and this likely will be given as the reason for her resignation in the near future as executive secretary of the aeronautical commission.

Free U. S. Warehouse.

Shanghai (Monday), Feb. 28 (AP).—Japanese today removed the seals from the American-leased warehouse in the International Settlement after their action in closing it had drawn a vigorous protest from the United States consul general, Clarence E. Gauss.

Hankow, China (Monday), Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Chinese press reports said today Maj. Gen. Fujishima, brigade commander in the 103d Division of the Japanese army, was executed in Nanking after being court-martialed on charges of spreading communism among the troops.

Berlin Maps Protest.

Shanghai (Monday), Feb. 28 (U.P.).—German embassy officials today were reported planning a protest to Japanese authorities against the stabbing of a German doctor by a drunken Japanese soldier.

Peiping (Monday), Feb. 28 (U.P.).—The ministry of education of the provisional Peiping government, established after Japanese occupation of the city, announced today that Tsinghua University, America's greatest cultural gift to China, will not be reopened. The university was occupied by Japanese troops last October. The once-beautiful campus and the well-equipped buildings today are nearly ruined. The buildings and equipment, valued at approximately $20,000,000 (Chinese) were paid for from the American boxer indemnity.

the door and marched back to join their cheering comrades.

Opposition speakers throughout Britain, meanwhile, demanded a general election to test whether the country was back of Chamberlain's policy of bargaining with both Italy and Germany—a policy which appeared to have headed Russia toward isolation from the councils of Europe.

Chamberlain, staking British prestige and his hope of peace on settling accounts with Premier Mussolini and Reichsfuehrer Hitler, offered no participation to Moscow.

Baron Strabolgi, the "labor peer," addressed 2,000 persons in Hyde Park, accusing Lady Ivy Muriel Chamberlain, widow of the Prime Minister's brother, Sir Austen Chamberlain, and the Virginia-born Viscountess Astor of "meddling" in foreign policy.

Woman "Envoy" Rumored.

Lord Strabolgi, scion of an ancient Scottish house, decried Chamberlain's "truckling to the Italians" in the face of "bullyin, and blackmailing by fascism."

(Chamberlain last week denied in Commons there was any threat in Italy's friendship overture but Anthony Eden, who resigned as foreign secretary because of the new policy, declared Italy had said "now or never.")

The baron said "Lady Austen Chamberlain has superceded the British Ambassador in Rome," reviving recent rumors that she had conferred with Premier Mussolini.

"The foreign policy of this country is no longer settled by the cabinet in Downing Street but in the country home of Lady Astor at Cliveden."

Lady Astor Scored.

"This country has not got to the position that we must have society ladies trotting about Europe in relation to foreign policy and you can understand how subject to flattery they will be in the presence of some great he-men, the dictators of Europe.

Labor Leader Clement R. Attlee, speaking at Gosport, called Chamberlain's policy "pathetic lunacy."

Russia was expected to wage what may be her last struggle to preserve Joseph Stalin's influence in the west by trying to smash Chamberlain's policy through the quarrelsome 27-nation Spanish nonintervention committee.

Chamberlain dismissed Russia as "partly European and partly Asiatic" in his outline of policy that shunned the League of Nations as a basis of collective security.

The League has been Stalin's biggest European mouthpiece, along with the nonintervention committee.

To ruddy-faced, skillful Ivan Maisky, Moscow's ambassador to London and champion of government in Spain in that committee, likely will fall the job of attacking Chamberlain's policy.

The committee was deeply divided on the new British formula to get foreign warriors out of Spain—a vital factor in Chamberlain's friendship negotiations with Premier Mussolini. Italy is a strong supporter of the Spanish insurgents.

The committee split, some sources said, has given Maisky his chance to attack the Chamberlain scheme.

He was expected to argue that Italy was seeking modifications of the British formula to weight it in favor of Generalissimo Francisco Franco. Maisky was likely to oppose the granting of belligerent rights to the warring forces on the ground it would be disadvantageous to the Barcelona government without genuine evidence that Germany and Italy really meant to quit helping Franco.

By thwarting Britain's proposal for solution of the long-standing nonintervention problem, Stalin's ambassador hoped to shatter Chamberlain's conception of a four-power pact likely to leave Russia alone to face Reichsfuehrer Hitler's eastward ambitions.

Schuschnigg Army Rings Graz, Blocks Nazi March on Vienna

Austria

per cent of the people thronging the streets of Graz tonight hotly favored Nazi government for Austria—and the sooner the better.

Many outspokenly urged complete political union with Germany.

The quick military countermoves prevented the march on Vienna from starting as planned today, but the Nazis insisted they would proceed with the plan later.

Nazi leaders said a "two-day armistice" had been arranged with the government at Vienna during which they would negotiate for more freedom of action.

Trucks, automobiles and motorcycles had been mobilized last night for the "march" which Nazis said was to have been a legal demonstration "to wake up Vienna."

Many of the marchers who had used Graz as an assembly point returned to their villages in which Nazis said hundreds of little communities were having their parades. After the parades the villagers signed the Nazi rolls of organization. Some villages boasted of being "100 per cent Nazi."

But that was not the story everywhere. The new political freedom which was a curious outgrowth of the conference between Hitler and Schuschnigg also encouraged Socialists and Communists who were making demonstrations in some villages.

Authorities Calm.

Authorities appeared calm and expressed confidence that some 15,000 troops now on hand in the province would be adequate for any emergency.

After the military demonstration Graz was fairly quiet. There were sporadic parades, however, under the watchful eyes of police. Fewer swastika flags were displayed than yesterday but the Nazi spirit definitely was abroad.

Nazis by the thousands, wearing swastika buttons, looked up curiously at the maneuvering airplanes but did not seem afraid. They shouted friendly greetings to the dozens of truckloads of soldiers rolling in from Vienna.

Provinces vs. Vienna.

One government official said he thought the Styrian Nazis numbered no more than 80,000 of the 1,000,000 population, while a Nazi leader said there were that many uniformed Nazi storm troopers alone and that sympathizers with the movement exceeded 75 per cent of the population.

Nazis openly were soliciting money for a "war fund" and one collector said 536,000 schillings (approximately $100,000) had been collected.

The Nazi efforts to gain control of Austria and its 6,700,000 population seemed to be developing into a conflict between the provinces and Vienna. Porvincial cities such as Linz, Innsbruck and Salzburg were described as far more receptive to Nazlism than Vienna where the federal government police keep strict control.

The Nazi center, however, was Graz, a metropolis of 165,000 persons in southeast Austria, which leaders of the movement hoped would become the "Nazi capital of Austria."

Berlin Agog.

Berlin, Feb. 27 (AP).—Austrian efforts to control growing Nazi influence in the province of Styria are arousing intense interest here.

Information available in official circles, however, still was very sketchy. Little was known beyond the fact that troops had surrounded Graz, the provincial metropolis, and military planes were circling over the city.

Nazis in Berlin are not surprised at the developments, as they interpreted Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's Thursday speech to Parliament as a warning the government would stop at nothing to put down the Austrian Nazi movement.

Red Activity Played Up.

Some quarters suggested the troop movements might be merely a show of force by Schuschnigg to discourage any thought of a popular uprising.

The Nazi press here has been playing up Socialist and Communist demonstrations in Austria rather than those of Nazis.

Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's own organ, Voelkischer Boebachter, has even accused Russia of fomenting trouble in Austria and threw out a hint that Hitler would permit no "Soviet interference" in the affairs of a German state.

If Leftist elements in Vienna—or elsewhere—should attempt to take advantage of the government's preoccupation in Styria to start trouble in zones from which troops have been withdrawn, ardent Nazis expect Hitler would consider immediately countermeasures against such "Soviet interference."

Six 'Air Forts' Fly Nonstop From Panama as "exceptionally high" and said the fliers "certainly deserve credit for this feat."

Woodring Tribute.

The squadron, which carried a personal greeting from President Roosevelt to Argentina's new President, Roberto M. Ortiz, left Buenos Aires last Tuesday for the return flight which was accomplished in four easy stages.

The entire distance of the round-trip flight was estimated roughly at 12,000 miles.

Secretary of War Harry W. Woodring, in a telegram to Olds, congratulated the flight commander and his men. The wire read:

"Please convey to all members of your command my personal and official congratulations on the completion of your remarkably successful flight to and from Buenos Aires. Your splendid achievement has greatly strengthened the bonds of friendship which so closely unite us with our great neighbors in South America.

"The President and the people of the United States are highly appreciative of the demonstrated efficiency of you and your companions who alone made such an amazing flight possible."

Chief of Staff Gen. Malin Craig, paid the following tribute in a telegram to the commander:

"My hearty congratulations to you and your men on the brilliant success of your great flight. Such an undertaking could only succeed through fine organization, splendid leadership and remarkable efficiency. The entire Army has followed the details of your flight from day to day and is proud of your achievement. You may expect to hear further from the War Department."

Six hours later they left Lima to hurdle the towering Andes and land safely at Buenos Aires after a second nonstop flight of 2,500 miles. This hop brought the giant planes a new record for the Lima-Buenos Aires flight—12 hours, 12 minutes—plus the honor of being the first flight of heavy military planes to cross the Andes.

The return flight was made via Santiago, Chile and Lima, to Panama, where the planes halted briefly for orders before starting their nonstop trip to Langley Field, where they are based.

Reds to Hold New 'Show Trial;' Charge Gorky Was Murdered

Soviet

Nikolai Bukharin, former editor of the government's newspaper Izvestia, and Harry G. Yagoda, one-time head of the N. K. V. D. (political secret police).

Two former premiers of the Soviet republics and four men who were commissars in such high posts as foreign trade, finance, agriculture and communications will be brought to trial.

The trial will be thrown open for world publicity.

Trotsky Named Again.

Foreign diplomats and journalists will be admitted, it was understood, in the first "show trial" since Karl Radek, Russia's best known publicist, and 16 of his companions went on trial in January, 1937.

In addition to the two medical professors—one a heart specialist and the other head of the Kremlin Hospital—who are charged with conspiracy in Gorky's death, the author's former secretary and a group of seven physicians will stand trial.

The medical men also are charged with conspiracy in plots to end the lives of V. K. Menzhinsky, former head of the N. K. V. D., and Valerian V. Kuibichev, former chairman of the Soviet state planning committee.

All of the 21 defendants allegedly belonged to "underground organizations" working to overthrow the Russian socialist state and combine the opposition elements of Trotskyists, Zinovievs, Bukharinists and Mensheviks.

The exiled Leon Trotsky, now in Mexico, will be described in the government's testimony, it was announced, as having plotted with a foreign power as far back as 1921 when he was commissar of war.

"Fascist Powers" Blamed.

This plotting developed, it was alleged, until 1926 when the 21 defendants who will go on trial Wednesday were at the top of Soviet power.

They allegedly sought to kill Lenin, Stalin and Sverdlov, first president of the U. S. S. R.

Topping the list of defendants are Bukharin, Yagoda and Alexei Rykov, for six years premier of the Soviet Union.

Bukharin and Rykov were the last of the "old bolsheviks" who rose to power with Lenin to be snared in the Stalin "purge" of the last 20 months. Rykov opposed Stalin's claim to power after Lenin's death.

Bukharin formerly was president of the Communist internationale and Yagoda fell in the trap of the secret police which he built.

All of the 21 men are charged with conspiring with "foreign Fascist powers" to overthrow the Communist regime in several provinces.

1,500 Shot to Death.

The trial, bringing before Soviet justice some of the best-known figures in Russian affairs, is expected to eclipse the trial and death sentences last June of eight of the Soviets' highest military commanders and the public "show trial" in January, 1937, of Karl Radek and 16 others.

In the last 20 months more than 1,500 persons have gone to death before Red army firing squads—there undoubtedly have been hundreds of others—and thousands have been imprisoned in the "purge" of accused Trotskyites and wreckers.

Those who will go on trial March 2 include:

Nikolai Bukharin, former president of the Communist Internationale and editor of Izvestia, official newspaper of the government; H. G. Yagoda, former head of the N. K. V. D.; Christian Rakovsky, former premier of the Ukraine Republic and former official of the public health commissariat; N. K. Rosenholts, former commissar of foreign trade; Grigori Fyodorovich Grinko, former commissar of finance; N. N. Krestinsky, former vice commissar of foreign affairs under Maxim Litvinoff; Mikhail Alexandrovich Chernov, former people's commissar of agriculture.

A. I. Rykov, former commissar of communications; Faizulla Khadazhaev, former premier of Uzbekistan Republic and former premier of the U. S. S. R.; Akmal Ikramov, former secretary of the Uzbekistan Communist party; Boris Sharangovich, former secretary of the Communist party in the white Russian Republic; V. K. Krutschokov, former secretary to Maxim Gorky; Prof. L. V. Levin, head of the Kremlin Hospital; Prof. D. D. Pletnev, leading heart specialist; V. I. Ivanov, V. A. Maximov, I. A. Zelensky, S. A. Bessonov, P. T. Zubarev, P. O. Bulanov and L. N. Kazakov.

Advice on Choosing a Wife?

Don't take it! Choosing a wife is one thing every man should do for himself. It's the same with a brewmaster in choosing hops. No laboratory rule-of-thumb can guide him. Only skill and experience can distinguish between the mere fragrance of ordinary hops and the medley of exquisite and elusive aromas that exudes from truly fine blossoms. The costly imported Saazer hops used in brewing BUDWEISER are chosen only after three separate and distinct judgings. Hence the sprightly bouquet that hovers over each glass of BUDWEISER ... and the distinctive taste that sets BUDWEISER so vividly apart.

Farmers Face Subsidy Cut in Excess Acreage

Farm

a bushel on the normal production from acreage allotted to them. However, if they harvest more than their allotted acreage, deductions from these payments will be made at the rate of 96 cents a bushel on the normal production of the excess acreage.

Likewise, corn growers will be paid subsidy rates of 10 cents a bushel on the normal production of their acreage allotment, but lose subsidy at the rate of 50 cents a bushel on the normal production of any extra acres.

Cotton growers face even larger deductions for "over-planting." If they knowingly exceed their acreage allotments, they will be denied all subsidies. However, if they unknowingly "overplant," their payments will be subject to deductions at the rate of 5 cents a pound on the normal production of the excess acreage.

Special Inducements.

The subsidy rate for compliance with the cotton program is 2.4 cents a pound. Benefit and deduction rates, respectively, for other crops include: Potatoes, 3 and 30 cents a bushel; rice, .125 and 1 cent a pound; peanuts, .2 and 2 cents a pound. The subsidy rate for tobacco varies, according to types, from .5 to 1.5 cents a pound, and the deduction rate from 5 to 15 cents a pound.

Inasmuch as winter wheat already has been planted while individual acreage allotments have not been determined, wheat growers who find themselves with acreage in excess of allotments may escape deductions by making a corresponding reduction in the acreage of other "soil-depleting" crops.

As an inducement for small growers to co-operate with acreage allotments, the program authorizes increases of from 8 to 10 per cent in payments under $200.

Officials said that if a grower's deductions exceeded his benefits, he would not be asked to pay the Government the difference. They also explained that the deduction rates under the subsidy program were not to be confused with penalty taxes which may be imposed on farmers' sales in excess of marketing quotas. These penalty taxes, which may be put into effect when approved in producers' referenda, are 2 cents a pound for cotton and 14 cents a bushel for corn and wheat.

Outside the major cotton, corn, rice, tobacco, potato and peanut-producing areas, acreage will not be alloted for individual crops. Instead, farmers will be allotted acreage for "soil-depleting" crops generally.

The Government will pay them a subsidy of $1.25 for each acre of their allotments and deduct $1.50 for each excess acre planted to "soil-depleting" crops.

Acreages Per Crop.

The AAA also announced that it was aiming at holding plantings of all "soil-depleting" crops to between 275,000,000 and 290,000,000 acres. Approximately 307,000,000 acres were planted to such crops last year.

The goals for the major crops: Corn, 94,000,000 to 97,000,000 acres; wheat, 62,500,000 acres; cotton, between 26,000,000 and 27,000,000; potatoes, 3,100,000 to 3,300,000; rice, 825,000 to 875,000; peanuts, 1,500,000 to 1,600,000; burley tobacco, 450,000 to 475,000; fire-cured and dark air-cured tobacco, 170,000 to 180,000; cigar-filler and binder tobacco, 85,000 to 90,000; Georgia-Florida type 62 tobacco, 2,800 to 3,000, and the remainder to other crops.

The program calls for restoration of 6,000,000 acres of eroded land to grasses. Federal payments for planting such land to grass will be 50 cents an acre.

The program provides also for division of farms into two classes—Class A and Class B. Class A farms are those in regions which generally grow food and feed crops in excess of home consumption needs. They include all farms in the corn and wheat belts and Oklahoma and Texas, as well as all farms in designated counties of eastern Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, northwestern Arkansas, central California and the potato and commercial vegetable farms in northeastern States. All other farms are Class B farms.

The distinction is made, officials explained, to enable farms of the latter class to participate in the conservation program without diverting acreage from food and feed crops needed for home consumption.

The subsidy and deduction rates, respectively, on the various types of tobacco are: Barley, .5 and 5 cents a pound; flue-cured, 1 and 10 cents a pound; fire-cured and dark air-cured, 1.5 and 15 cents a pound; cigar-filler and binder, 1 and 10 cents a pound, and Georgia-Florida Type 62, 1.5 and 15 cents a pound.

Wealthy Lawyer Denies Son Has Been Kidnaped

a further examination of the evidence, which may become a basis for diplomatic action.

Both Vetterli and Hardy predicted further arrests would be made within two days, indicating possible Nation-wide ramifications in the alleged espionage ring—the first "spy scare" in the United States in many years.

(Cable dispatches from Moscow today said Soviet authorities there were "greatly interested" in another angle of the case—the asserted attempt by Rumrich to obtain American passports for the purpose of aiding German spies to enter Russia.)

Government agents said Rumrich attempted to impersonate Secretary of State Cordell Hull in a telephone conversation with the local passport bureau, in which he peremptorily demanded that 50 passports be sent to him at a midtown hotel.

Code "Cracks" Rumrich.

Feigning compliance, the bureau delivered the blanks to "Hull's" secretary, a "Mr. Weston"—but the messenger was a G-man in disguise.

Quickly arrested, "Mr. Weston" stubbornly maintained silence for three days, refusing to disclose his identity, until Vetterli confronted him with a code key and coded letters seized from Fraulein Hoffman when the S. S. Europa docked.

Then "Mr. Weston" cracked, admitting he was Rumrich. Vetterli said the former Army sergeant made a complete confession of his role in the international plot, including the theft of secret data on Atlantic Coast artillery defenses and fortifications and the highly confidential plan for defending the Panama Canal Zone in wartime.

Took Lowly Job.

Rumrich, who assertedly deserted from the infantry at Fort Missoula, Mont., was in the Army for five years, including a tour of duty in the Canal Zone. Later, he served with the Sixteenth Infantry on Governors Island, N. Y., the headquarters directing the coastal defense of America's richest territory—the Port of New York and the great textile and chemical-producing backstretches of New Jersey and Delaware.

Rumrich was born in Chicago of Austrian parents. His father was secretary to the Austrian consul there, until transferred to Bremen, Germany.

The 27-year-old prisoner, whose alleged confession would brand him a traitor to the American Army oath and uniform, returned to the United States in 1929, and although he had gained a brilliant technical education during his student days in Germany, he enlisted as a $30-a-month roughboy in the Medical Corps in 1930.

Went "A. W. O. L."

He went "A. W. O. L." shortly after his enlistment, was caught and spent six months in prison. Despite this record, he was promoted to sergeant when he was transferred to Fort Clayton, Panama.

Fraulein Hoffman, employed as a hair-dresser and manicurist on the North German Lloyd liner Europa, was said by Vetterli to have acted as a "carrier" for coded letters and as pay-off agent of the spy ring.

Vetterli said she had brought money, on her latest voyage, to pay New York agents for information they had stolen, and that she had not only a batch of code letters but also the master code for deciphering them.

Admits German Plot.

Woven in with the military secrets-passport thefts was a melodramatic plot to lure Col. H. W. T. Elgin, commander of Fort Totten and the Sixty-second Coast Artillery, to a New York Hotel to gain possession of certain secret documents—and then, according to the investigators, to kill him.

The plot was set for January 29 or February 1, but never materialized. Vetterli said Rumrich admitted the plot was formulated in Germany and that the same source subsequently ordered him to drop it.

Rumrich received $50 a month for his work, it was disclosed, and when arrested he had a crudely-drawn reproduction of a tank and airplane.

Vetterli said the Hoffman woman's code letters included one offering $1,000 for information on the construction of the aircraft carriers Enterprise and Yorktown.

portedly proved in secret tests, will reach its peak today when Glenn L. Martin, Baltimore airplane manufacturer, testifies before the House Naval Affairs Committee on the President's expansion program.

Martin was represented by Lester P. Barlow, inventor of the aerial bomb, in a letter to the committee, as believing that developments of devastating aerial attack was imminent and would render battleships practically obsolete.

Barlow claimed Martin had plans "well along" for a super-bombing plane which could carry five 2,000-pound "mines" about 8,000 miles and which would make this country impregnable to naval attack. He said the mines could destroy any battleship afloat.

Despite opposition to battleship building features of the program, Congressional leaders expect to obtain passage of the program by an overwhelming majority in the House.

Representative Ralph O. Brewster (Republican), Maine, member of the House Naval Affairs Committee, in a radio address last night said the "20 per cent increase in our Navy at this time cannot be construed as other than indicating an American intention to engage in power diplomacy under the guise of promoting world peace and security."

"Might Be Treason."

Representative Ed V. Izac (Democrat), California, spoke on the same program in support of the program, arguing:

"Some would have us believe there is an ulterior meaning to be placed on the present effort of the President to keep our fleet built up somewhere near the strength of England and Japan; they search for hidden meanings, for secret agreements, they look for English winks and American smirks."

Izac said it "might be treason" not to follow the naval course charted by President Roosevelt and the Navy Department.

Meanwhile, ranking Army air officers will have an opportunity to present their case when a House Military Affairs sub-committee, headed by Representative Dow W. Harter (Democrat), of Ohio, starts hearings late this week or early next.

The inquirers into the Army air strength will seek evidence on the effectiveness of airplane operations in the wars in Spain and China, and may initiate a drive for increasing American air strength beyond the goal recommended by the Baker board.

Would Be Superior.

Committee members pointed out that should our military forces be augmented in conjunction with the proposed naval air increase, American power in the air would have no superior and few, if any, peers.

During the day Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Army Air Corps, warned that large-scale military airplane production could not be brought into existence overnight. An adequate air defense must be ready at the start of hostilities, he declared, writing in the publication Army Ordnance.

It requires a minimum of about five years from first steps to develop a design until a reasonable number of ships are built, delivered and in use, he pointed out.

France Stands Firm.

The vote of 439 to 2 by which the Chamber of Deputies underlined its confidence in the Chautemps government, following a two-day debate on foreign policy, is a striking demonstration of the French people's capacity to abandon all internal differences when the safety of the nation is threatened.

Certain developments in Europe during the past fortnight have obviously not been to France's liking. With Austria seemingly slipping into Germany's arms, with Czechoslovakia more than ever at Hitler's mercy and with the British government preparing to negotiate with the dictators, the French feel themselves in a very precarious position.

But those who argued from this that France's mood would be more and more one of panic were decidedly mistaken. In the discussions in the Chamber on Friday and Saturday the note of hysteria was distinctly absent. On the contrary, Foreign Minister Delbos' program speech, in which he outlined the course France intends to pursue in the face of the present European emergency, was sober, realistic and firm.

France, he made clear, will continue adherence to the principles of the League Covenant, will maintain her alliances with Czechoslovakia and Russia and preserve her friendship with Great Britain. She will go along in the negotiations undertaken or contemplated by Prime Minister Chamberlain with Mussolini and Hitler. But the Paris government is not in the least prepared to accept any settlements that do not provide effective guarantees of their being carried out. In the meantime, France will continue building up her defenses and will oppose the "setting up of any political hegemony in the Danubian area."

That this program has the approval of the overwhelming majority in the Chamber, and probably of the country at large, Saturday's vote has demonstrated. If, over longer or shorter stretches in the past, France has been in the grip of a defeatist mood, this obviously is not true at the moment. Heartened by Austria's will to resist, by Czechoslovakia's clear warning to Hitler that she will fight if her independence is threatened, France is not disposed to retreat further before the dictators.

More Senatorial Patronage.

The Senate has approved an amendment to the independent offices appropriation bill requiring senatorial confirmation of all experts and attorneys appointed to non-civil service positions paying $5,000 or more yearly. Senator Norris succeeded in exempting the TVA from this provision, but it includes a long list of important independent agencies, such as the FTC, the FCC, the ICC, the SEC and the Veterans' Administration. The effect of the amendment would be to convert all the better-paid positions in these services into patronage plums for senatorial distribution.

Some Senators indorsing the amendment placed great emphasis upon the fact that it does not apply to anyone now in Government employment or any person heretofore or hereafter appointed under the civil service law. It was argued that the Senate is quite as competent to pass upon the qualifications of experts and attorneys as are the heads of administrative bureaus. Indeed, Senator Glass maintained that "there is more politics to the square inch in the administrative bureaus created in Washington in a month than there is in the United States Senate, so far as my observation goes, in a year."

Senator Norris was willing to admit that there was some justification for such charges, but he pointed out that still greater abuses would result from putting "on the political pie counter" all these $5,000 per year appointments. If the independent agencies had to obtain the approval of certain Senators or prominent politicians every time they need the services of a new lawyer or expert, they would be seriously handicapped in their efforts to secure competent personnel. At present independent agencies are at least able voluntarily to apply the test of merit in making appointments to positions exempt from the civil service. But they would have no chance of maintaining that policy if the Senate amendment should be enacted into law.

Any Senators who are genuinely anxious to protect the Government service against the machinations of those whom Senator Glass calls "the miserable bureaucrats in Washington" know well what to do. Instead of grabbing more spoils for themselves, they should promptly extend the civil service law to cover all except a few policy-determining positions. That is the only effective way in which to protect the service against the depredations of spoilsmen, whether of the bureaucratic or senatorial variety. It is the method indorsed by Senator Norris, a stanch and courageous upholder of the merit system. But it is very obviously a most unpalatable remedy from the viewpoint of a majority of his colleagues.

Two War Control Bills.

As the House Military Affairs Committee reported out its drastic war-time control bill, a not dissimilar measure was the subject of a turbulent debate in the Japanese Diet. Fortunately for this country, the two measures may be considered under entirely different circumstances. Japan is under the stress of war. In the United States the centralization of power now commonly associated with modern warfare can be contemplated from a more objective viewpoint.

The Japanese war control bill would permit the government to mobilize the people in industrial pursuits to support its military enterprises. Goods could be taken over for "general mobilization" and rigid control over the whole industrial and business structure would be permitted. Newspapers could be suspended. With these powers, the cabinet would be free to pursue its military objectives independently of the legislature. That is why the measure has been so vigorously denounced in the Diet for its "Nazi style."

In this respect, however, the Japanese bill appears to be little more sweeping than the May bill approved by the Military Affairs Committee. Upon a declaration of war it would make the President a dictator with far broader powers than have ever been exercised in this country.

The bill would forbid any rise in wages, prices, rents or other commercial rates after a declaration of war, except as adjustments might be made upward or downward by the President. Government control would be extended over "material resources, industrial organizations and public services" when the President considered it necessary. He would have full authority to draft into military service young men between the ages of 21 and 31.

Managers of industrial establishments could be required to enter into the service of the Government as civilians, and licenses might be used to control exporters, importers, manufacturers and others. The President could even decree priority for the filling of orders and the shipment of goods.

The chief difference between this bill and that which has produced such a violent controversy in the Japanese Diet seems to be the exemption of the press from its licensing provisions. With that exception, the May bill would create a fascistic state here for the duration of any war. It may be persuasively argued that such concentration of power is essential to the waging of modern war. Indeed, that is the argument which seems to give the cabinet an upper hand in the Tokyo dispute. But if that conclusion must be accepted, then it becomes another powerful argument to keep out of war.

The provisions of this bill would remain in effect, once war had been declared, until passage of a resolution by Congress proclaiming that the war had terminated. It is questionable whether such complete control over the economic system could be readily relinquished after a war without creating serious disturbances. Certainly it would be difficult to revert to a free economy. That problem as well as the mobilization of efficient machinery for war time ought to be thoroughly considered before this drastic measure advances further toward enactment.

The Problem Of Medical Care.

The Technical Committee on Medical Care has performed a most useful and needed service in calling attention to the gap between this Nation's medical needs and the ability of a large section of the population to pay the costs arising out of these needs.

At least one-third and possibly as much as one-half of the American people, the committee declares in its report just issued, are too poor to provide themselves with adequate medical attention when sickness occurs. The result is that, while sickness and mortality rates have been lowered for the country as a whole, these rates for the poor of our large cities are "as high today as were the gross rates of 50 years ago." And the toll taken by illness and premature death in this country annually is believed to be in excess of $10,000,000,000.

This unhappy situation does not primarily arise out of any shortage in medical facilities. We have, the committee points out, a sufficient number of doctors to take care of our needs. But the distribution of physicians is most uneven and so is the distribution of clinics and hospital facilities. The real problem is how to provide those unable to bear the costs with the medical aid essential to health.

That problem, the committee believes, must be considered and dealt with on a national scale. Only in that way, it has concluded, can the health of the American people properly be safeguarded. Since unemployment is now regarded as a national problem, it is difficult to refute that logic. Certainly no national resource is of greater moment to the United States than the physical well-being of the people.

The committee has not attempted, however, to say the last word on this vital subject. It has asked the country to consider the problem of medical care in its broadest and most comprehensive aspects. And it has made a good start in that direction. Its illuminating report should be made the starting point for further discussion looking toward corrective action.

Favoring Tennessee Valley.

Ardent appeals for flood control induced the Senate to write into the appropriation for the TVA an item of $2,763,000 to begin construction of an immense dam at Gilbertsville, Ky. The House had eliminated funds for actual work on the dam and provided for further study on the ground that its value is too questionable to justify commitment of Congress to an ultimate expenditure of $112,000,000 or more. But the Senate yielded to an utterly illogical argument that this expenditure will most effectively promote flood control.

Senator Vandenberg brought into question the high cost of power to be produced at Gilbertsville. Doubts were also raised as to the value of the dam for navigation if it is kept partially empty as a precaution against floods. But Senator Norris brushed all arguments on navigation and power aside. "We are justified in building this dam," he said, "and spending every cent it will cost—no matter what it costs—to control floods."

Flood control is admittedly a serious national problem. But, as Senator Miller pointed out four dams already are under construction in the Tennessee Valley. Senator Norris had previously claimed that other TVA dams helped to save Cairo in the floods of last year. With the completion of the four additional dams now provided for, the Tennessee Valley ought to be better protected against floods than any other section of the country where rising waters have been a recurrent menace.

It was not until 1936 that Congress adopted a national flood control program. Under that act the Army Engineers Corps will spend $60,000,000 this year, and the 1939 budget calls for $50,000,000 more. This money is being allotted to projects scattered throughout the country where the dangers of flood damage are greatest.

In the Tennessee Valley alone, however, the Government has spent more than $500,000,000, a large part of which has gone into flood control projects. Now it is proposed to spend another $112,000,000 on a questionable project in that area, while only meager sums are available to all the rest of the country. It is estimated that four or five years would be required to build the dam, which would mean a heavy annual outlay during a period when funds for more urgent flood control are likely to be scarce.

The undesirability of "putting all our eggs in one basket," as Senator Miller pointed out, should be sufficient to bring about a postponement of this costly project. But there are still other considerations. Even Senator Norris, father of the TVA, has suggested an investigation of that agency. Its directors are obviously working at cross purposes. Moreover, the President is trying to work out an agreement with private power interests operating in the Tennessee Valley as to the possible sale of plants and distribution of power. Even if the Treasury's prospective deficit for the ninth consecutive year could be ignored, this is certainly not a time to launch another huge TVA project. Instead of expanding its activities, the TVA should be consolidating its position until a more definite policy concerning its future can be worked out.

Isolation And Armaments.

It is now generally admitted that because of recent developments abroad the opposition hitherto manifested in and out of Congress to the Administration's rearmament program is rapidly disappearing.

This may seem, at first glance, to be an illogical chain of cause and effect. Theoretically the United States was no less isolated before Schuschnigg's surrender, Hitler's speech and Eden's resignation than it is now. Actually, however, the fact is plain that insofar as the system of collective security obtained in the Old World it benefited us and every other peace-loving power.

That system, it is now clear, has been thrown on the scrap heap. What new arrangement will take its place remains to be seen. The new system may, in the long run, prove better and it may prove worse than the one which obtained from 1919 to 1938. But for the time being every nation, including the United States, is compelled to stand on its own feet and look to itself alone for the defense of its security and its independence.

The maintenance of peace in the Old World, or any other continent for that matter, is and always has been to our advantage. By the same token anything that tends to disturb the peace constitutes a threat to us. And so the more nearly we actually find ourselves isolated in a world in which force is the final criterion, the greater the burden of armaments we are compelled to bear.

Somebody could get rich selling cotton stockings if he would advertise them thus: "Cotton stockings are more durable, economical and comfortable than stockings made of silk, but they are not flattering. They are recommended only for girls with trim and shapely legs."

In this country current spending by governments is nearly twice their current incomes. It can't long continue to happen here.

Uncle Sam is spending money at the rate of $13,000 a minute. And whether you are superstitious or not, this is terribly unlucky for the taxpayer.

Dictatorship Vs. Democracy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of February 21, Otto Strecker writes to show us that we ought to be ruled by a dictator. He notes an encouraging trend in that direction.

No one human ever was, or now is, or ever will be, qualified to control the destiny of any other human. Human beings are not puppets. The dictators assume that they are—all except himself. He rebels at authority over himself and seizes power. Short-sightedly, he inflicts on others what he rebels against for himself. Short-sightedly again, his power of control is physical force. It is destined to break. So it is written on every page of history and within every human being.

Democracy, even with its faults, has fairly proved itself in what it has achieved in an enlightened, responsible humanity, surpassing in this fruitage other systems which have had their day. Its faults are largely inheritances from former systems. Clearly democracy has proved its vision and power by its progressive achievements beyond what other systems have conceived, thereby giving humankind its strongest assurance.

C. C. TUCKER.
Riverdale, Md., Feb. 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The beauty-loving Japanese, the culture-loving German people and the music-loving Italians are caught in the iron claws of ruthless men who are forcing guns into their hands when the people really want peace. Such leaders are inevitably destroyed. The people always win out at last.

I cannot see how any right-thinking American, who lives here under the protection of our flag, could admire these psuedo-leaders. Our Constitution, our democracy and our laws are the best bet for the American people. We don't want any dictators. We still have freedom of speech and we still have the right to vote, and we will exercise both and put the men the people think best in office. Away with nazism, communism and fascism and all other foolish isms. Let's say with Patrick Henry, "Give me liberty or give me death," only let's say it louder and longer.

Silk And Jobs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Women today are asked by various organizations not to buy silk stockings and other silk goods because the raw silk comes from Japan. It is claimed that were this boycott effectively applied, it would deprive Japan of the means with which to finance her war with China. But there is another side to this boycott which will concern our own industry. The amount of silk in stockings and other goods is small, in comparison to the labor used in their manufacture. This labor, of course, is American.

We imported raw silk amounting to $90,038,915 from Japan in 1936. Through the manufacture of this raw material, about 123,000 people are employed by the American silk industry. If Japan in turn were to boycott American cotton, which she purchased from the United States in the amount of $98,560,883 in 1936, she would be at no disadvantage, since she could buy cotton eleswhere. During that year we also exported to Japan petroleum and petroleum products valued at $25,650,240, automobile parts and accessories in the amount of $13,015,963, and industrial machinery amounting to $5,006,536.

It is different, however, with articles manufactured 100 per cent in Japan which perhaps could be made in this country. Our import in manufactured goods from Japan amounted to $39,475,000 in 1936. We, therefore, should discriminate between raw materials such as silk and cotton, and articles such as china, toys and manufactured textiles.

As much as we would like to express our disapproval of Japan's attitude toward China, we cannot overlook the result that a boycott of raw silk from Japan would have upon our own industry. Do those who are asking women shoppers not to buy any goods made from silk realize that they are jeopardizing the employment of thousands of American workers?

Summer Concerts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was interested in the letter of Fred R. Ohl appearing in The Post of February 26. It showed an appreciation of the National Symphony Orchestra and a desire for civic benefit which makes the best sort of attitude for a music-loving citizen. He is quite right in saying that the open-air concerts give great pleasure to those who are here in the summer and employment to the musicians. But being apparently an intelligent person he has thought these points out for himself. And, counting on his intelligence, I should like to point out to him the facts on which he has not yet correctly informed himself.

First, the summer audiences of 7,000 to 5,000 cannot be made pay because no admission can be charged in public parks, and the only ticket charges are for a chair or a seat pad for the comparative comfort of those who want them.

Second, the 1936 season put on by the musicians did not pay but left considerable financial difficulties in its wake, although the orchestra association helped by the loan of equipment, stands, seat-pads, etc.

Third, the National Symphony is the instrument, so to speak, on which these concerts are played and its very existence is necessary before plans can be made for its activity. Therefore, it is not in a position now to provide for the summer concerts as Mr. Ohl believes it to be, as its first duty to thet citizens who are supporting it is to provide the orchestra itself.

The summer concerts mean an addition to the budget. As far as "owing it to the public to do so," as Mr. Ohl puts it, that, I think, is entirely out of the picture as this is a civic philanthropy, a nontaxable, nonprofit-making, educational and cultural undertaking, made possible by 2,000 contributors and administered to the best of their ability by a board of directors, an association of members, and a group of workers, unpaid and untiring, whose compensation lies in the value of what the public is getting and the evident eager appreciation of that public.

JOHN ROWLAND HILL.
Washington, Feb. 26.

The Jefferson Memorial.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Despite the fact that we are hearing practically nothing about the Thomas Jefferson Memorial, the plans are going forward for its erection and one of these mornings we shall hear the announcement that the plans have been completed, the site chosen and approval given and the necssary legislation enacted to begin construction.

I believe any thinking citizen will agree with my idea that it isn't a tremendous pile of useless stone and mortar that we want as a memorial to one of our greatest statesmen—something that can never be of any possible use to anyone. In the first place, the perpetrators of this plan are not thinking of what it would mean to Jefferson's memory. They are thinking how nice it will look in years to come to see their names carved on the memorial as its supporters; and of the glory it will mean to them.

We, the taxpaying, "lower class" majority want a memorial that will benefit mankind for years to come—a hospital, a university—something that will be accessible to the poor unfortunates who are unable to attain these things for lack of funds. Jefferson would have it so. We demand it so. JAMES STYRON.

'Only Servants.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Concerning the "Park Anywhere" public servants about whom we have heard so much these past few days, I'd like to say this:

Why does the public stand for this sort of thing? If my help disobeys my rules and orders, they are called on the carpet. And the same thing applies to all servants. These men are only servants and 'must obey our laws and rules. We pay them and they must at least be as respectable as their employers.

A Memorial To Justice Holmes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The House Library Committee, under the chairmanship of Mr. Kent Keller, is debating whether or not the Government should accept as a gift the former home of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

It developed in committee hearings that the Government apparently could find no use for the property and that merely to acquire and preserve it would prove a liability. Positively there is no point in preserving a house if no use can be made of it, but some of the facts are as follows: In addition to the house, the justice willed approximately $250,000 to the Government. Now, in appreciation of the service which the justice has rendered to his country, the Government wishes to establish a suitable memorial in his honor. The hobby of Justice Holmes was poetry, the mother of all the arts, and in the composition of which he became quite proficient.

Incidentally, a chair for American poetry was only recently established in the Library of Congress by an anonymous donor. This office is now housed in a little two-by-four room on the third floor of the Library of Congress. Thus we consider the importance of poetry. Consider it by comparison with the establishments which house other activities. The Government is doing and has done much for painting, sculpture and the other arts, while it has done absolutely nothing for the promotion of poetry.

It would seem that no memorial would be more fitting and appropriate and that no plan more practical and ideal could be adopted than to accept the home of Justice Holmes, together with his other bequests, and make this home the seat for the regent who holds the chair of poetry in the Library of Congress. All of this could be done without costing the Government one cent. The results would be far-reaching in encouraging the poets and furthering poetic activities.

Here in this home might be acquired a collection of portraits of American poets. Here might be placed bronze and marble busts of American poets who would not be likely to enter the portals of Statuary Hall in this day and age. Here might be conceived and carried to completion a plan for the promotion of poetry in America that would produce such verse as would make the Elizabethan Age pale by comparison. Certainly our poets should be given some form of official recognition and encouragement. Other countries have long ago established the practice of encouraging these "workers of words."

A memorial to Justice Holmes for this purpose would certainly be supplemented in future years by gifts from others who are interested in poetry. If we have any pride in our literary pursuits, let us encourage them; if not, then we can continue to show it in the future as we have disgracefully done in the past.

Bedtime Story.

"I HEARD a riddle today," said Mrs. Trainum.

"I wanna go to sleep," said Mr. Trainum.

"Mumph."

"And at the same time a drunk left Lafayette for Chicago, on the same track."

"What sort of a track?"

"A one-way track."

"Naw, I mean was it a racetrack or a bear-track?"

"A railroad track, silly—one-way, with no sidings."

"'S absurd—nobody would build a one-way railroad track without any sidings."

"Well, this one didn't have any. Anyway, the Norseman and the drunk left at the same time——"

"Why a Norseman? Wouldn't an Assyrian do just as well?"

"No; it was a Norseman, and a drunk, and they left at the same time, and they both got to their destination without any accident. How did they do it?"

"Look here, what kind of a riddle is this; is it on the level or is it a phony?" said Mr. Trainum.

"What do you mean, a phony? A Norseman and a drunk——" began Mrs. Trainum.

"Yes, I know all about the Norseman and the drunk. But if I work out some way it could be done, would that be the answer, or is there a joke to it that I couldn't know about unless I was told?"

"The answer comes right from the terms of the riddle. A Norseman——"

"Sure, a Norseman, but why? It must be a phony, because if it were an honest problem a Welshman or an Italian or just a plain American would do just as well. There's no use in my trying to guess if there's a trick to it."

"Do you give up, then?"

"Of course not!"

"If you don't guess, you give up."

"Well, I don't give up. I suppose they had a tunnel."

"That's not the answer. Besides, how would a tunnel help?"

"I d'know. But if a tunnel would get the trains past each other, would that be the sort of answer you want?"

"I can't see where that's important."

"It is important, because I can work out a way it can be done, but what's the use if when I finish you say it's not right?"

"If you get it right I'll tell you."

"That's not what I mean. I can work out a way to——"

"What makes you so sure you can?"

* * *

"Suppose it was this way," said Mr. Trainum, "when the trains met, the man from Chicago got out of his train and got in the train from Lafayette. The man from Lafayette got out of his train and got in the train from Chicago. Then the train from Chicago backed up until it reached Chicago again, and the train from Lafayette backed up until it reached Lafayette."

"That's not right," said Mrs. Trainum.

"But you'll admit it could be done that way?"

"Yes . . . I suppose it could. But that's not the answer."

"See, I told you I knew it was a phony."

"Do you give up?"

"No, I don't give up. Maybe the Lafayette train pushed the Chicago train all the way back to the end of the track, where there was a roundhouse."

"It wasn't anything like that, because the trains never came together at all."

"Then you didn't state the riddle fully in the first place."

"I did—I said they didn't have any accident, and I meant by that they didn't come together."

"What do you think I am, a mind-reader?"

"If you were, you'd know the answer."

"I've already got one answer. I can't help it if it isn't your answer."

"Do you give up?"

"You might as well tell me, I suppose."

"That won't do."

"All right; I give up."

* * *

"Well," said Mrs. Trainum, "the Norseman was a Norse and the drunk was a Souse, and Norse is Norse and Souse is Souse and never the twain shall meet."

"There, I said it was a phony."

"I don't see anything wrong with it, I think it's very amusing. Do you think you could do better?"

"Yes, I can. I'm tired of the way riddles are made and I'm going to invent an entirely new kind."

"I can't wait!"

"There was an old Persian and he had three sons. He called them to him and said, 'My children, here are five apples. They are for you, but you must distribute them among you so that each will have an equal share, yet you must not cut any apple in parts.' So they killed the old man and ate the apples."

"I don't like that."

"Why don't you like it?"

"It hasn't any point to it."

"But that's just the—oh, well! Do you want to hear some more of my riddles?"

"No, I want to go to sleep," said Mrs. Trainum.

THE OBJECTIONS to Mr. Roosevelt's decision to become a professional journalist on the side, although they do have a ring of honest shock, seem to call for reconsideration of the terms of employment governing this job. It would then be found that the President violates nothing more important than some people's taste and that he might exploit his office for personal gain in many honorable ways which have not even occurred to him, or, if so, have been rejected for one reason or another, ethical or practical.

PEGLER.

The protests are based on tradition, but tradition is not legal and binding, and there is nothing in the contract which would forbid a really enterprising Chief Executive to install turnstiles at the White House doors and charge a modest admission fee, to sell autographs and indorsements, to charge a high price for fireside chats under commercial sponsorship or to start a news agency of his own with an exclusive right to sell the information which is now given free at White House press conferences and sold, at considerable profit, by those to whom it is given.

I recall no exact precedent for the installation of turnstiles or the sale of autographs, but our Presidents, and particularly Roosevelts and Democrats, are noted for their preference for new ones of their own making.

As to the sale of indorsements, however, an American President could cite the example of Her Majesty Queen Marie of Rumania, who released a testimonial accompanied by her photograph in a rather saintly costume, and to the British royal custom of issuing citations from the King to his personal purveyor of bloater paste, underwear, whisky and tires. To be sure, the British monarch does not sell these indorsements, but that is a small difference which certainly would be fully compensated by the implied reaffirmation of the profit motive in this country.

• • • •

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN as Secretary of State, an office which is commonly regarded as second only to the Presidency, fought for and, by sheer persistency and loyal appreciation of money, established the principle that it is all right for a high official of the Government to deliver speeches for hire on his own time, using the prestige and box-office power of his official position for all they are worth at the gate.

And the method by which news is disseminated in Rome, although slightly different in detail, could be invoked in justification of a decision to classify news as a perquisite.

Mr. Hoffman, the Michigan Representative—a Republican, of course, and therefore likely to be a man of bias—seems not to have considered the facts of the situation in objecting to Mr. Roosevelt's venture in journalism. If he had given calm thought to the matter he must have realized that this country long ago accepted the proposition that honest pickings are the due of those who occupy distinguished positions among us.

• • • •

IT WAS SO HELD long ago in the case of the heavyweight championship of the world—the fairest bauble in fistiana's realm, as it is often called—whose successive incumbents all have written voluminously and with no suggestion from the sidelines that they are degrading an office which, for a certain period in the '20s, seemed to outrank the Presidency itself.

It may be pointed out, too, that in a country whose cry is "Democracy and More Democracy" the President were less than democratic should he impose on his own conduct restrictions which are not accepted by statesmen of lesser degree. Thus, if it be right and ethical for Congressmen to employ their own relatives as secretaries and place them in other Government positions as Congressmen surely do, then a truly democratic President would seem a great snob were he to refrain from providing jobs for members of his family in the public service. Mr. Roosevelt may cite his own record in refutation of any charge of snobbery on this score.

To turn once more to a great sister democracy for guidance, it may be observed that the entire British royal family are provided with palaces and appropriate incomes—a system which obviates any temptation to accept jobs as lobbyists or to use aggressive methods of salesmanship on firms desiring to stand well with the government.

There are some jobs which are worth so much in pickings that men serve without pay and actually pay to be hired. Waiters in certain restaurants have been known to do that. But, of course, no President would be asked to work for pickings alone.

The dignity of the office must be maintained.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Our Own Professor Quizzem.

Q.—Miss Doopsey, a man plans to build a house. He wants 11 rooms, all opening outdoors on sun porches so he can get plenty of fresh air and cross-ventilation. How many stairways four feet wide will be necessary?

A.—None. He can solve everything by putting in elevators and omitting windows.

Q.—Correct. You're next, Mr. Dimwitt. Is this statement true or false? Pajamas were invented by one of Napoleon's orderlies and first worn in America by Abraham Lincoln during the debates with Douglas.

A.—Only partly true. It wasn't Napoleon at all, Lincoln was at Shiloh at the time and you must be thinking of the smock, which came in under Buchanan.

• • • •

Q.—Correct. Mr. Abercrombie, now we come to you. Why was George Washington called the father of his country?

A.—I don't know, unless in those days it was thought more advisable to father a nation than to mother it.

Q.—Very good. We're back to you, Miss Doopsey. "A" has 5,000 acres and raises cotton and psyllium seed, "B" has 3,000 acres and raises wheat, rye and tea. "C" has 500 acres and runs a trailer camp. Which will be best off at the end of the year?

A.—I am not certain, but "C" will have the fewest orders from Washington.

Q.—Righto! Now, Mr. Dimwitt, what is the difference between a periscope, a pergola and a peristyle?

A.—That's a silly question, Professor.

Q.—Correct. Now here we are again around to you, Mr. Abercrombie. Is this statement true or untrue? The stalagmite was first played in this country by Iturbi, the Swiss composer.

A.—It's not even close, Professor.

Q.—Correct. Miss Doopsey, who said "Let them eat cake?"

A.—I'm not sure, but I know who said "It is the Government's duty to see that everybody gets more pie."

Q.—Let's not get into politics. I'll change your question. Which is hardest to putt on a putting green, a coconut, a bowling ball or a watermelon?

A.—I can promise you that they are all easier to get into the cup than a golf ball.

Q.—Correct!

A.—You're telling me!

Q.—Now, Mr. Dimwitt, which is more difficult, ordering your eggs boiled four minutes and getting them that way, boxing a compass or teaching the big apple to a middle-aged woman in a telephone booth?

A.—Would you mind repeating the question?

Q.—Repeat it; I don't even remember it. I pass on to Mr. Abercrombie again. Mr. Abercrombie, what is the difference between an erg, an egg, a noggin and an eggnog?

A.—Just because you're on the wagon you don't have to appear that ignorant, Professor!

Argentine Letter

Buenos Aires Correspondent Predicts Better Washington Relations, Gran Chaco Settlement And Brazil Entente.

By Peter Thicket,

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Buenos Aires.

"SAYING IT WITH FLYING BOMBERS" seems to be the new order of the diplomatic day. The United States, taking a page out of the propaganda technique of Italy, sent to the inauguration of President Roberto M. Ortiz, an exhibit of its aerial power. Brazil was also present with gold braids to salute the new executive of the Argentine nation. Generals and captains of the Brazilian army lent color to the ceremony. These martial notes at a ceremony which ordinarily calls for frock coats, or full dress, as was the old Latin-American custom, regardless of the hour or day, is symptomatic of the time. It was all the more remarkable because a general had just stepped down from the presidential chair to make room for a civilian and the assumption of power by a civilian in Argentina was meant to signify end of the revolution of 1930.

President Ortiz begins his new regime under heavy storm clouds. His opponents call into question the legality of the election which brought him into power and on many sectors refuse to co-operate with his administration. The world economic situation and that of Argentina in particular are not so rosy as when Senor Ortiz was minister of finance and there are serious reservations as to the immediate future of this meat, wheat and cereal exporting country. And like the rest of the world Argentina has not been able to insulate herself from the ideological struggles which are dividing the world and to keep aloof from the currents which are pulling the Latin-American nations in two or more directions at the same time.

Social Legislation Intrigues All Nation.

THE ARGENTINE PRESS has been discussing the many internal problems of the nation and speculating as to what the new administration will do with them. Some of these are social legislation, minimum wages, malnutrition, schools and education, about which there is grave concern because of their relation to national efficiency and to the spread of exotic isms. Argentina has been perturbed by her transportation problem. Discussions have been on foot about the possibility of "nationalizing" the railroads, many of which are British-owned. She is building automobile roads and this has centered her attention on the whole problem of oil both as an internal and external question.

The nation has been troubled by tendencies in the political fields which have given rise to heated debates and to fears that the republic might take leave of the democratic tradition and practices. Editorials in the leading papers of this city have called upon the new administration to eschew the semi-fascistic methods of the last regime and to return to an order of pure elections, of legislative checks and of provincial autonomy. The legislative power last year passed three laws, two of which were leaves of absence for the president and vice president. Federal interventors have supplanted popularly elected provincial governors and the federal government was accused of having manipulated the election so as to seat its own choices in power.

The policies toward the territories in the south of the republic have been discussed and rediscussed. Foreign debt and exchange, imports and exports, and other problems of a financial and fiscal nature are constantly bobbing up to harass the editor and the politician. And there seems to be no doubt that all the gears are not in mesh either within the nation or of the nation with the world. The great dailies of this city maintained a discreet silence for some time about the cabinet chosen by Dr. Ortiz. They have hammered away for democracy. Disaffected political parties gum up the works in Congress by refusing to sit or by obstinate refusal to budge.

Foreign Affairs Post Deemed Highly Important.

SOME ANALYSTS have come to the conclusion that the new cabinet is "centrist." Though some believe that it leans to the right. Here as almost everywhere in America the biggest question mark is with respect to the new Minister of Foreign Affairs, Dr. Jose Maria Cantilo, tall, plain spoken, 61-year-old politician and diplomat. His own views on many subjects are not fully known because at the Inter-American Conference for the Maintenance of Peace, held here in December, 1936, in Rome where he was Argentine Ambassador, and at Geneva where he represented his country at the League of Nations, he has been the spokesman for Don Carlos Saavedra Lamas, the foreign minister.

No one who attended the meeting will ever forget the fight between Dr. Cantilo and Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, then Ambassador of Brazil to Washington. In the pollyanna spirit of the Peace Conference of 1936, the five Central American nations had presented a project of convention on all-American amity and solidarity. At that stage of the meeting it was something of a redundancy, but withal a harmless affair. Sr. Cantilo announced that Argentina could not and would not support this "regionalist" understanding. The undercurrent of animosity toward the Argentine point of view broke through on this occasion and, though Sr. Cantilo stuck to his official guns, it was not clear whether he also expressed his own view.

Though the effort has been made to disavow any special fondness for fascism and for Italy on Cantilo's part it was during the peace parley that Sr. Cantilo's efforts to sign a new treaty with Italy were given wide publicity. Whether this originated with Italy, with Sr. Cantilo or with the Argentine foreign office no one seems to know. To have, however, the Argentine-Italian relations paraded at the very time when peace and democracy were the keynotes of the American press and of the peace conference was taken to be a clear demonstration of trends or beliefs in certain Argentine circles. In any event only the future will reveal where Sr. Cantilo's own preferences lie.

The foreign relations of Argentine under the new administration are of greater interest and importance to American and to the world than her internal policies. It is assumed that the change in the foreign office will now make it possible to speed up the solution of the Gran Chaco problem and to make a definite peace between Paraguay and Bolivia. Two cabinet changes alter radically the relations with Brazil and promise to ease the tenseness in a situation which was not generally known but which promised to explode on the slightest provocation And recent trends seem to suggest that Argentine is less hostile to Washington and to an "American system" than it was a year and a half ago.

Liberal Trend Halted By Revolution Of 1930.

FUNDAMENTALLY the internal social and economic structure has not altered much in the past few years. In fact, the revolution of 1930 halted a liberal and social trend so that the small ruling aristocracy regained some lost ground and has been able to rule the roost since then. This trend was greatly favored by the fact that the federal governments, through luck or wisdom, were able to "turn the corner" back in 1932 and to bring prosperity to the nation. This city is a booming, renovated, modern capital and despite Argentine nationalism and dislike for the United States it is the most American city in Latin America. It is the only one with a Chinese restaurant, than which there is nothing more American.

American businessmen and concerns who were sitting pretty here while their colleagues and compatriots in the United States during the depression were not sitting at all, agree almost to a man that the United States should alter the sanitary agreements with this nation in the interests of better trade and diplomatic relationships. Some go so far as to say that the ineptness of American diplomacy was displayed by the frantic efforts to cultivate Don Carlos Saavedra Lamas when the whole situation lay in the hands of meat and wheat interests in the United States, who are not eager to have to compete with these Argentine products.

The visits of Mr. Hoover in 1928, of Mr. Hull in 1933 and of Messrs. Roosevelt, Hull and Welles in 1936 have had a cumulative effect in tearing down the psychological resistances against the strengthening of bonds with the United States. But as in other cases the splendid achievements of Mr. Hull and Mr. Welles at the peace conference were not followed up and if Argentina has moved closer to Washington in recent days it is because world events have pushed her there and not American diplomacy. Somehow or other the Argentines are not much interested in the magnificent mint-juleps which the American Embassy makes to perfection.

In Latin America and in all-America the position of the Argentine is an influential one. Her internal trends and her relations with the outside world and of the United States and the outside world with Argentina are of great importance because she is one of the featherweight nations whose weight on the plates of the fairly evenly balanced scales of the world can tip them in one direction or another.

Of Price Laws

By P. T. Hitchens

An Analytic Symposium.

THE FIRST COMPREHENSIVE EFFORT at business regulation, the Sherman antitrust law of 1890, represented an attempt by government to protect the consumer against unjust price burdens resulting from monopolies in business. The attempt to outlaw unfair trade practices as between business competitors, however, began with the passage of the Federal Trade Commission act of 1914. But the trade commission act, like the Sherman law and the Clayton act, which was also passed in 1914 in an attempt at clarification of the Sherman law, failed to achieve its objectives.

• • • •

THE ROBINSON-PATMAN ACT, which became law in June, 1936, represents a further attempt to outlaw unfair trade practices in business. It is directed primarily at price and other discriminatory advantages granted by sellers to chain stores at the expense of small and independent store owners.

Because of their size and consequent ability to place large orders, chain store organizations have been able to obtain much greater discounts from sellers than could smaller and independent store owners. But because of their power to exert pressure on sellers, chain store organizations were often able to obtain price reductions that bore no relation to advantages received by the seller due to size of the order received from the chains. The chains also received special advantages in the form of advertising allowances, brokerage and more favorable terms of sale than were granted to small and independent store units.

The Robinson-Patman act seeks to prevent the granting by sellers of price reductions and other special advantages to buyers that do not reflect a genuine economic advantage to the seller and that are not made available to all buyers on the same or proportionally equal terms. The primary purpose of the act, as indicated above, is to equalize competition between the chains and small and independent distributors of merchandise.

• • • •

THERE HAS BEEN great uncertainty and considerable confusion as to the meaning of the new act. But several test cases have been passed on by the Federal Trade Commission, and clarifying decisions by that body have indicated lines along which buyers and sellers can safely proceed under the law. Business itself has indicated a desire to comply with the law. Sellers, in particular, have revised their price policies and have reviewed their practices with respect to quantity discounts, advertising allowances, brokerage diversion to large buyers and terms of sale.

But, even with the best will to comply with the new law, there are many questions relating to the Robinson-Patman act and to its meaning and implications that are still shrouded in uncertainty. These and many other matters pertaining to the law are discussed in an interesting and penetrating manner by the contributors to a newly published symposium.

Anyone seeking an authoritative statement of the causes, objectives and results of the Robinson-Patman act will find his quest amply rewarded by acquisition of this book. Prepared under the general supervision of the editor of the Annual Survey of Economic Legislation, the volume brings together contributions from recognized authorities in the field of business regulation.

• • • •

PERHAPS THE NATURE of the book can best be indicated by listing the subjects contained in the table of contents. There are six chapters, as follows: "Historical Background," "Economic Factors," "Legal Analysis," "Distribution," "Marketing," and "Pioneer Cases."

The chapter relating to historical background deals with "Anti-Trust Laws and Regulation of Price Competition." The chapter on economic factors covers "Economic Aspects of Some Recent Trade Legislation." The third chapter—"Legal Analysis"—deals with "The Robinson-Patman Anti-Discrimination Act" and "Basing Point and Freight-Zone Price Systems Under the Anti-Trust Laws." The chapter on distribution embraces the following sub-topics: "Business Under the Act," "Legislative History," "Retailing," "Co-operatives" and "Trade Associations." In the chapter on marketing the following subjects are dealt with: "Marketing Under the Act," "Food," "Paper" and "Cost Defenses Under the Act." The final chapter relating to pioneer cases covers "Effect of Two Pioneer Decisions Under the Patman Law," "Substantial Lessening of Competition" and "Remolding the Anti-Trust Laws."

It is impossible within the compass of a brief review to deal with each of the contributions listed above or to deal with any of them comprehensively. There is, however, a single theme running through all of them which can be briefly stated. That theme is the practice indulged in by sellers in business of granting more favorable prices to certain buyers than to their competitors, the effects of this practice in driving out of business small and independent distributors by large buyers or chains of buyers, and the efforts to eliminate such practices and thus to place all buyers, large and small, on a more equal basis of competition.

• • • •

ANOTHER BOOK by Representative Patman, co-author of the Robinson-Patman act, is intended, in the words of the author, "to clarify the intent and scope of the act . . . and define the sound management policies which insure honest operation under the act." With this purpose in view, the author considers the various clauses of the act and defines the unfair practices which they are designed to prohibit. The book should prove helpful to manufacturers and other sellers in steering a safe course under the new law.

"Expert Skepticism"

By Paul B. Taylor

THE GREAT BATTLE now being fought in British politics over the question of concessions to Italy and Germany raises the problem of "peaceful change" to primary political importance. It poses the crucial question to all "satisfied" and "peace-loving" countries whether they shall offer such adjustments in the near future or merely arm themselves for defense, postponing any idea of concessions until the "have-nots" abandon their threats of war. For more than two years, however, large corps of scholars in various countries have been working on many angles of the problem.

This book, which is part of that effort, does not lay down finished proposals for settlements in the Pacific area. Instead, it merely outlines the data bearing on peaceful changes which have been collected in ten years of research and discussion by the Institute of Pacific Relations. The Institute, a private international organization largely financed in the United States, has covered a wide field in this work. It has examined, at one time or another, the main demands made by both China and Japan—Chinese demands for revision of the "unequal treaties," and, for example, Japanese pleas for population outlets and for access to raw materials and markets. What is more important, it has carried along research on such problems as land utilization, population and migration—basic conditioning factors for the effectiveness of any international arrangements which can be made.

It must be said that no method of peacefully revising treaties against the will of powerful parties has yet been found. The work of the IPR has, however, thrown light on the essential conditions which must be taken into account in any voluntary agreements. It also exposes the pointlessness of a number of the slogans now used to justify wars for expansion. This last is, however, an occasion more for despair than for satisfaction. Doubtless intelligent research affects public opinion and policy in the long run. The fact that expansionist wars go on despite expert skepticism, however, shows how small the immediate influence of research of this type is on the policies of some governments.

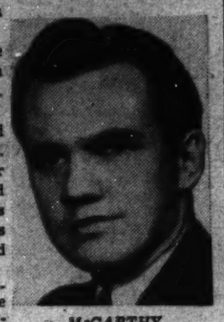
Dragons On Your Back?

MR. EINAR KLUGE is a tattooist, but he's watching Congress like a hawk. Daily, he glances at the papers and follows the course of the Administration toward a bigger and better Navy, for in a larger Navy Mr. Kluge sees the rebirth of tattooing.



McCARTHY.

"Mr. Roosevelt will give tattooing the biggest boom it has had in years," Mr. Kluge says.

And Mr. Kluge should know about such things. He's been a tattooist for more than 20 years, and while he hasn't lost traces of a Swedish accent, he's been in Washington off and on since 1924.

Right now, he's established in a closetlike little room in the back of a barber shop in the 500 block of Pennsylvania avenue. And when I went in to see him he was not averse to holding forth.

"But write about tattooing," he warned. "I had vun man years ago ask me questions and he wrote about sardine factories in my home town, in Sweden. Vat's that got to do vit tattooing?"

Mr. Kluge pulled his hat down over his forehead with a savage gesture.

"Yust let me get my hands on that guy—I cram his story down his throat!" Mr. Kluge illustrated his statement by bracing his stocky body against the wall of his booth, and raising for examination two good-sized paws, each of which was decorated with faded butterflies.

After that was off his chest, Mr. Kluge relaxed and allowed a beatific smile to creep over his round face. He was talking shop, and he loved it.

"How I get into this game? Vell, a friend of mine bought some instruments to be a tattooist. But he decided after a vile to give it up. So I bought the instruments."

"What'd your pal give up tattooing for?"

"He vasn't much good," said Mr. Kluge." He give it up ven four guys he tattooed vent to the hospital!"

But what was one man's misfortune was Mr. Kluge's good luck. And now, he's sold on his art. He never put anybody in the hospital and attributes his success to keeping his needles clean.

• • • •

TATTOOING, apparently, requires some skill in free-hand drawing, though that isn't essential if you can trace.

"But unless you yust vant to give them the standard size, you've got to draw," Mr. Kluge said. "Now, take this one," he said, pointing to a four-colored serpent on the wall. "I got a celluloid stencil of that. I put a little vaseline on the skin. Pour black powder on the stencil. Put stencil on only skin, and the outline stays there. Then, I yust trace it vit needle."

But, for the outsize jobs, Mr. Kluge just rolls up his sleeves and creates.

Who gets a tattoo job? Everybody, according to Mr. Kluge. Business isn't so good this winter, but he says he gets all kinds of people during the summer when business is really rushing.

He claims that he has had college students who wanted their family coat of arms inscribed under their epidermis. Just last week a WPA worker paid him $20 for a masterly four-color job of a nude St. George fighting a horrifying green dragon. That was a big job, and went on the back. However, most of the regulation-sized jobs, which run from a half a dollar to six, go on the arm from wrist to shoulder.

But the real job of being a tattooist is not in the ordinary jobs, according to Mr. Kluge. He likes to think of such jobs as the one he did a while back.

"He vas an old sea captain," said Mr. Kluge." He vas 82 years old, and hadn't been touched since he vas 32. But he came in to me, and I put a $15 yob on his back . . . a four-masted schooner."

Mr. Kluge claims that, despite the captain's age, he didn't mind the tingly operation at all. In fact, Mr. Kluge has decided that age is of no consequence. He has decorated the epidermis of at least a half a dozen grandmothers. And he particularly recalls one recent customer, verging on 60, who bounded into his closetlike little room and received her first tattoo job, which, as Mr. Kluge recalled, was a series of bleeding hearts superimposed on a cross.

The grandmothers are no harder to handle than the others, Mr. Kluge claimed, but women in general are a bit more touchy than men. "Sometimes, they holler a bit," he says simply.

• • • •

THE REAL distinction in the tattooing game, according to Mr. Kluge, is not so much by sexes, as by race.

"You take the Mexicans, and the Italians," he said, "they like ones like these." He pointed toward a number of lurid crucifixion scenes, and a three-color cross, entwined with garlands and serpents.

"Now, the Swedes and the Americans like Oriental stuff," he said as his finger swept majestically across a chart of Chinese dragons, and cootch dancers.

English and Americans like flags and eagles, too. The Irish like the harps." Mr. Kluge paused momentarily in his dissertation, as though seeking to recall an incident.

"I had one funny case," he said, "of a Mexican that vanted an Irish harp. I yacked the price to $8 because I knew he shouldn't have a harp." Mr. Kluge had the look of a man whose grasp of ethical nicety is beyond reproach.

"But the Mexican vanted the harp," said Mr. Kluge, "and he paid the $8. So I put it on and even threw in an Erin Go Bragh!"

• • • •

IF MR. KLUGE'S life holds a tragedy, it lies not in the death of the wearers of his masterpieces and their subsequent dissolution, nor is it in the small regard for which his art is held. The thorn in Mr. Kluge's rose is the barber who operates the shop in the front room.

"Did you ever tattoo him?" I asked.

Mr. Kluge's face became at once wrathful and despairing.

"Naw," he grunted. "He's Assyrian. Can't do nothing vit them. Now, if he vas Greek—"

Mr. Kluge rolled his eyes, and his round face beamed.

"If he vas Greek," he said, raising his hands heavenward, and wordlessly he evoked the vision of the barber virtually staggering under the weight of broken hearts, green-gold dragons, headstones, dripping daggers, and battle fleets in action.

'Hello America' Hour Tonight On Radio Chain

Senator McAdoo to Speak on Veterans of Foreign Wars Program.

The seventh annual "Hello America Hour," sponsored by the District Department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, will go on the air at 11:30 o'clock tonight over the blue network of the N. B. C.

Senator William Gibbs McAdoo (Democrat), of California, will be the chief speaker, while Scott B. Squyres, national commander in chief of the V. F. W. will administer the obligation to new recruits in the 3,600 V. F. W. post meetings throughout the Nation.

The broadcast is to take place from the National Press Club, where Washington members of the V. F. W., with their guests, will gather for a banquet at 7:30 p. m.

Guests will include Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the Veterans' Administration; John Russell, national commander of the Army and Navy Union; Thomas Mason, department commander of the American Legion, and members of Congress.

Musical numbers on the radio program will be furnished by the United States Navy Band Concert Orchestra, Eddie Duchin and his orchestra, playing from Los Angeles, and Ruby Newmans and his orchestra, playing from New York.

South Americans WeighImmigration

Geneva, Feb. 27 (AP).—Delegates from seven South American "immigration" nations and eight "emigration" nations, including Japan, were gathered in Geneva tonight on the eve of a conference on immigration to South America.

The conference, called through the League of Nations International Labor Office, is concerned primarily with making available land for settlement and means of financing both immigration and settlement.

The "emigration" nations concerned, in addition to Japan, are Austria, Hungary, Poland, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and the Netherlands. The South American nations are Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Ecuador, Uruguay and Venezuela.

Forum on Opera To Be Held Friday

An opera appreciation forum will be held Friday evening at the Rialto Theater, it was announced yesterday. Prof. Will Hutchins, of American University, will preside, and music critics of Washington newspapers will form a discussion panel.

The forum, arranged by T. Arthur Smith, local concert manager, is in connection with the approaching eight-day engagement of the Chicago Opera Company at the Rialto.

A highlight of the engagement will be the operatic debut of Frank Parker, radio tenor, in "Traviata" March 8. The company includes former Metropolitan Opera singers.

Robert Byrne Chairman Of New Stage Union

Robert Byrne, formerly active in Washington dramatic circles, has been elected chairman of the stage's newest union, the Theatrical Designers and Painters, associated with the United Scenic Artists Local 829 of the A. F. of L., it was announced yesterday in New York.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Stengle Vs. Mencken

Col. Charles I. Stengle, A. F. G. E. president, brags a figurative shotgun loaded with facts and all the emphatic nailheads of indignation and fires one solemn round at Henry L. Mencken.

The Colonel's wrath was touched by an article from Mencken's pen belitting Government employes and exaggerating their number; but mostly was he moved by the vehicle or method which Mencken employed to impress his point. The Baltimore sage filled a whole newspaper page—rather seven columns of the page—with infinitesimally small dots and claimed that each of these represented a Federal job-holder, to the total number of 1,000,725.

"The actual enrollment at 10 o'clock this morning was reported to be 999,264 head, but additions were being made at the rate of more than 100 an hour," Mencken stated in the one column that was not full of dots. So far as we know, the Colonel alone, among all the Federal field here, has taken time out to tell Mencken he's all wet.

"It would be interesting to know where he (Mencken) discovered that there were, or are, 999,264 employes of the United States Government," replied Stengle. "The latest figures possessed by the Civil Service Commission cover the month of December 1937, and the January figures will not be available until the first few days in March. . . .

"There were in December more Government employes than at any time since November 11, 1918, but of a total of 889,550 in the service—almost 110,000 less than (Mencken's) figure—72,953 were additional postal employes engaged to handle the Christmas mail. Eliminating this seasonal crop, the figure would be brought down to 816,597, which means that the number of Federal positions has declined by 54,140 since June, when the total was 870,737. . . .

"There are not, and never have been, 1,000,000 employes of the United States Government, and the facts are readily available," said he, definitely releasing Mencken to return to his other fields of uplift, namely the Hookworm Belt and the morals of the Nation.

A few welcomes were said recently at the FCA: William H. Moore, of Chicago, comes to the Finance and Research Division. Moore is a research fellow at Brookings, a former investigator for the Treasury Department, and has also spent several years in the field of public accounting. For two years he was an instructor in economics and business at the University of Arkansas. He is a graduate of the University of Chicago . . . Harry M. Love, of Ithaca, N. Y., comes to a position in the Co-operative Division. He is a graduate of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and has engaged in the teaching of vocational agriculture in the Virginia schools and in research upon agricultural and economic problems. In 1924 he helped organize farmers' co-operatives under supervision of the Federal Farm Board . . . Dora Mae Anderson, of Fayetteville, Ark., comes to the Division of Information and Extension . . . Mrs. Helen H. Notes

Persons interested in the arguments for and against an agricultural control program should reserve the date of March 3, when a general forum on the subject will be held in room 358 of the FCA Building. A. D. Stedman, assistant administrator of the AAA, will lead the discussion. The panel will include representatives of some of the leading farm organizations, and the discussions will cover the farm bill recently enacted. The forum begins at 7:45 p. m. . . . The big employe event tomorrow night is the testimonial dinner to be tendered Gen. Frank T. Hines by Local Union 2, N. F. F. E., in recognition of his 15 years service as administrator of veterans affairs. The event, to be held in the Mayflower Hotel, is expected to attract more than 1,000 persons . . . Also tomorrow night, the New York State Democratic Club of Washington holds its first rally and dance in the house at 1500 Rhode Island avenue northwest. Among the speakers will be Representatives Carolyn O'Day, William T. Byrne, Alfred F. Beiter, Joseph L. Lanzetta, and Eugene J. Keogh. The club has invited all Democratic Congressmen, their wives and secretaries.

Banquet to Honor Gen. Frank Hines

Completing 15 years of service as administrator of veterans affairs, Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines will be honored by a testimonial banquet at the Mayflower Hotel at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Senators and Representatives will join Luther P. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, in paying tribute to Gen. Hines, who has served under Presidents Harding, Coolidge, Hoover and Roosevelt.

Before Tragedy Befell General's Family.

By Edward T. Folliard

Tonight, midnight, marks the fourth anniversary of the return of John Barleycorn to Washington with legal credentials.

A moment after the clock hands embraced at midnight and March 1, 1934, began, a parched old timer in the National Press Club downed a whisky highball and smacked his lips.

That was the death of prohibition in the National Capital—the end of an experiment that had lasted 16 years and four months.

It was the beginning—so most people hoped—of an era of civilized drinking.

On the question of whether these hopes have been realized, it is still possible to get an argument, particularly from those sincere individuals who insist that no liquor drinking can be civilized.

Another Argument.

Whether Washington is drinking more now than it did before repeal is another question that stirs up argument. It is an argument, however, that cannot be settled, because bootleggers never made reports to the District Building.

The one outstanding and unassailable fact about repeal is that it has enriched the District treasury. In the four-year period, a total of more than $7,000,000 has poured in from liquor taxes and license fees.

In the fiscal year of 1937, which ended June 30, the District took in nearly 2,000,000 — $1,213,854 from taxes on beverages and $737,116 in license fees. The expenses of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board were only $39,026.

What has happened to the army of bootleggers who supplied Washington with whisky, gin and "cawn" in the 16-year period of the "noble experiment?"

Some Got Licenses.

A hurried survey yesterday showed the fates had dealt variously with them. Some were lucky enough to get licenses and open bona fide liquor stores. Others have restaurants. One was reported to have become an undertaker; another is a lawyer, and highly respected. Quite a few are in the gambling racket. As for the others, some are dead, some are in jail, and some are—well, still bootlegging.

Not even the ABC board denies that bootlegging continues here. The amount of it, however, is small.

When the bars close down at 2 a. m. (or at midnight Saturday) there are always those who want "just one more." They constitute the trade of the remaining bootleggers, who hang out at designated spots after hours and sell $1 whisky for $1.50.

There is another class of bootleggers who cater to the alley trade, which is made up largely of confirmed drunkards who still prefer the cheaper and more volatile "high moon" of yesteryear.

Temperance Respected.

An encouraging development in the repeal era has been the increasing respect accorded temperance, or, for that matter, abstinence. The psychology of this was recently explained by a Washington man who polished off many a pint in the prohibition era.

"In those days," he said, "I did a lot of vicious drinking. I hated prohibition and I thought I was striking a blow for liberty every time I took a drink. My friends felt the same way. There were times, of course, when I realized I had been hitting it up too hard. However, when I tried to go on the wagon, my friends would call me a sissy and say I was letting them down.

"Today that is all different. Today a fellow gets some credit for being on the wagon. I attended a banquet the other night and fully a third of the men were passing up their drinks. They didn't do it surreptitiously, as they have in the old prohibition days. They just told the waiters they weren't drinking, and not to bother. If a man had done that before repeal, he would have been howled down as a slacker."

Flying Fortress Salutes Crowd Welcoming Return Home

How a Nerve Message Travels Shown by Slow-Motion Plant

Columbia Scientists Demonstrate That Electrical Conductivity of Fiber Increases 100 Times at Point of Impulse.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 27.—The Meanism of nerve messages, a puzzle to scientists for 160 years, was partly cleared up here today in a discovery reported to the American Physical Society.

These impulses, which travel by electricity, in a few thousandths of a second, were reduced to slow motion by Dr. Kenneth S. Cole and Howard J. Curtis, of the college of physicians and surgeons, Columbia University. They were able to see the mechanism.

The Columbia scientists got their slow motion in a plant, nitella, the green fibers used frequently in gold fish bowls. This strange plant fiber transmits an electrical impulse exactly like a living nerve. It is one of the rare class of plants which seem to "feel," like the venus fly trap, which snaps shut at a touch.

But nitella's "nerve" messages travel only 1 centimeter a second. At that rate it would take a man nearly two minutes to move his hand to touch something he wished to pick up.

This slow passage of the electric spark-like impulse enabled the scientists to measure its passage past an observation post on the plant nerve. The post was an electrical recorder resembling a wheatstone bridge.

It proved for the first time the degree of the electrical changes in the traveling spot, or impulse.

Ordinarily the membrane of a nerve, the area which passes the electric message along, is somewhat resistant to electric current. The slow motion showed that in the spot where the message was moving, the membrane's conductivity increased by 100 times. This great increase was not previously measured.

Blossom Festival Aide Is Appointed

Winchester, Va., Feb. 27.—Mrs. B. B. Dutton, prominent Winchester social leader, has accepted appointment as chairman of the committee charged with entertainment of the queen and her court for the fifteenth apple blossom festival, Tom Baldridge, director general, has announced.

Mrs. Dutton's committee will issue the invitations to the members of the court of Her Majesty, Queen Shenandoah XV, and will have charge of planning the official social functions which are held each year.

Cupid Ignores Airline's Stewardesses a Month

San Francisco, Feb. 27 (AP).—The United Air Lines said today it was "heartened" by the fact that no stewardess had resigned in the last 30 days to become married.

It was the first time in two years that a month had passed without loss of at least one stewardess to Cupid. The line lost 51 stewardesses in that manner last year.

Organization News

Fort Stevens Post.

Fort Stevens Post No. 32 Squadron, S. A. L., will hold contests during the spring months in whittling and carving, top spinning, horseshoe pitching, kite flying and model boat races. The drum and bugle corps will practice at Roosevelt High School Tuesday at 7 p. m.

The post executive committee last Wednesday perfected plans for the final membership drive under Senior Vice Commander George Norton. Plans were made for a dinner-dance May 8 in Stansbury Hall, arrangements to be under Ed Donaldson. Commander John T. Long presided.

On March 26 the senior drum and bugle corps will lead the Forty and Eight parade down upper Georgia avenue on the occasion of the honor society's "wreck." On March 1, the corps will meet in business session in contemplation of its spring program and national convention transportation problems. President M. J. Lyons will preside.

Commander Long will name post representatives to the department committees for the annual departmental convention, Memorial Day activities and Flag Day at the March 3 meeting.

Sergt. Jasper Post.

The next meeting of the Sergt. Jasper Post will be held at the Pythian Temple, 1012 Ninth street northwest, March 2 at 8 p. m.

The March meeting of the post has been designated as Bundle Night by Post Commander Daniel M. Goodacre and the members are requested through Douglas Reed, welfare committee chairman for the post, to bring clothing for needy veterans and their families.

The Post Assistant Adjutant Mark Little has been appointed to the office of post adjutant to succeed Charles R. Strode, whose resignation of that office has been accepted by Commander Goodacre.

Two important post committees are expected to make their reports at this time. They are the committee for the revision of the post constitution and by-laws under the chairmanship of Edward L. Marthill and the auditing committee on the chairmanship of Harry G. Boydstun.

More than 150 legionaires and their friends attended the banquet sponsored by the post in honor of Department First Vice Commander Fred Money, a member of this post, at the New Colonial Hotel last night.

Tricyclist Is Burned; Navigated Into Stove

Faulty navigation of his tricycle yesterday sent two-year-old George Stanton of 312 Third street northwest to Casualty Hospital with second degree burns of the left thigh and leg. Riding in the kitchen at 831 H street southwest, he fell against the stove.

At the hospital, where he was taken by his mother, Mrs. Anna Stanton, his condition was said to be undetermined.

U. S. to Launch Amity Drive in Latin America

Officials Study Fascist Propaganda in Southern Hemisphere.

By the Associated Press.

The United States Government is undertaking by many means to bring this country and Latin American States closer.

Although denying this policy was a counter-defensive to fascist propaganda in South America, officials yesterday admitted it might have that effect.

Under the leadership of the State Department, methods of promoting more intimate relations with Latin-American nations are to be put into operation within the near future. Meanwhile, officials are studying the development of European fascist propaganda in South America.

The State Department is outlining ways of encouraging increased private radio transmission to Latin America and also is consulting with Government experts on the possibility of instituting a Government station for this purpose. Two bills to start a Government radio station already are before Congress.

Recently the State Department took on a special official whose duties are to link the United States and Latin-American nations in a union of friendship. He is Richard Pattee, of New Mexico, formerly instructor at the University of Puerto Rico.

State Department officials studying the development of fascist propaganda in South America have reached these conclusions:

The propaganda is being pushed so hard that at times it reacts on itself.

It is not diminishing, however, and may be increasing.

It is carried on in many subtle ways: By radio, books, professors, students, military decorations, flights, free trips and pressure on newspapers through local advertisers of German or Italian nationality or descent.

It is not producing any material change in South America. Many governments of South America had dictatorships before Mussolini started his fascist state.

James B. Burch Dies in Florida; Veteran Rail Man

Mr. Burch, in failing health for several months, went to Miami a week ago.

A native of Charles County, Md., Mr. Burch had worked for the railroad for 30 years. He had been an engineer since 1917, on the Washington-New York run. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen. He was also a member of the Knights of St. John.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary L. Burch; two sons, Francis E. and James B. Burch, jr.; three daughters, Mrs. Anita Day, Miss Gertrude L. Burch and Miss Christine Burch, all of Washington; a brother, F. A. Burch, and sister, Mrs. F. A. Martin, of Charles County.

Westminster Legion To Honor State Leader

Westminster, Md., Feb. 27 (AP).—Carroll Post, American Legion, headed by Bruce T. Bair for two years before he was elected State commander of the legion, will honor the former commander with a reception and dance Thursday.

Prior to the reception, a parade of veterans' organizations will march through the streets to the State Armory.

Postal Vacancy Filled.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., Feb. 27.—Mrs. Wallace S. Barnes has been appointed acting postmaster of La Plata, Charles County, to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of H. Holland Hawkins, who had been in office several years. Mrs. Barnes had been assistant at this office.

'Little Season' Dies, But Teas Continue

Mrs. Ritter Shakes Hands From 5 Till 7 in 'at Home;' Senator Caraway and Mrs. Miller Lead Arkansans to Nook.

By Elizabeth Ford.

February began to go out in a flurry of teas yesterday, and this afternoon and evening it will give over to March in another set of teas, dinners and social jamborees. The "little season," which never does get a chance really to grow up, but which is exceedingly precocious while it lasts, will, in another minute or two, take to its wings. However, as the saying has it, "The good die young."

Yesterday quite a group of cup-and-saucer balancers gathered at Mrs. William McClellan Ritter's for another of her series of at homes. Among those who plied guests with hospitality from the set of silver urns on the center table were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of Justice Stone; Mme. W. Bostrom, wife of the Minister of Sweden; Mrs. William P. MacCracken, jr., and Mrs. Russell Sard. Others who solicitously inquired if you were the sort of person who takes one lump or two included Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne and Mrs. Shropshire Steele.

By way of detail: Mrs. Ritter, who shook hands from 5 to 7, wore a black velvet dress, trimmed with touches of lace, and the four walls of her home were filled, north, south, east and west, with masses of calla lilies and roses.

While Mrs. Ritter's party was spinning along to the entire satisfaction of all who attended it, members of the Arkansas delegation campaigned to Georgetown with Senator Hattie W. Caraway and Senator and Mrs. John E. Miller in the vanguard. Their destination was the "Arkansas Traveler," a nook near Key Bridge, recently opened by Mrs. Jack Marshall. Among those who were present and for whom Mrs. William Oldfield presided at the tea table, were Representative and Mrs. William J. Driver, Representative and Mrs. Claude A. Fuller, and Representative and Mrs. Ben Cravens. Others glimpsed on the premises were Representative and Mrs. David D. Terry, Representative and Mrs. John L. McClellan and Representative and Mrs. Wade Hampton Kitchens.

Senator Dennis Chavez, of New Mexico, and Mrs. Chavez crossed State lines to be present, as did Representative Sam Reyburn, of Texas, and Mrs. Rayburn. Others who browsed among Mrs. Marshall's hooked rugs, Chippendale chairs and Philadelphia lowboys were Commissioner and Mrs. Melvin C. Hazen, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Miles, Mr. and Mrs. Julian N. Friant, Postmaster and Mrs. Vincent Burke, Mr. and Mrs. James Beaty, Col. and Mrs. Beatty Moore and Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Richardson.

Still another tea was held yesterday by Capt. Enrique Prieto and Senora de Prieto, who entertainted informally after 5 o'clock at their residence on Massachusetts avenue.

Many Dinners Before Dance

It's "Dinner Ahoy" for the Navy relief ball tomorrow evening . . . so many people seem to be planning culinary cheer before the dance gets under way. Among those who will fete their friends at feeds are Miss Alice Barry, Miss Betty McBride, Miss Ray Williams, and Miss Betty Rowan, who will entertain the girls' committee and their escorts before the Sail Loft spree.

Others who will give pre-dinners include Capt. and Mrs. W. N. Galbraith, Capt. and Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson, Capt. and Mrs. A. B. Reed and Commander and Mrs. Greene W. Dugger.

Dear, dear, just when we get to thinking there is nothing quite so exciting as Washington society (the way it keeps straight on through Lent and everything), announcement comes that the dates have been set in London for the "courts" at Buckingham Palace.

When the fog lifts, the cream of British society, plus a few nice people from other countries, will scrape and bow on May 11 and 12 and July 6 and 7.

The Lord Chamberlain, a very fussy gentleman, who doesn't care a hoot about whether or not it is good Schiaparelli, has decreed that at the functions, debutantes are to be presented in full-skirted princess gowns and that the post-debs are to wear close-fitting gowns in princess style. He's obviously drawing a fine line.

Anna G. Sheer Becomes Bride Of J.C. Rickman

Miss Anna G. Sheer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Sheer, of Washington, yesterday afternoon became the bride of John Charles Rickman, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Rickman, of Keswick, Iowa. The ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. J. E. Cowhig, took place at Our Lady of Victory Church at 3 o'clock.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a lovely gown of white satin, cut on simple princess lines and terminating in a train. Her long veil was fastened by orange blossoms to a delicate lace cape and she carried a bouquet of vivid American beauty roses.

Miss Jean F. Sheer, her sister, who served as her maid of honor, was attired in a blue dress, fashioned with a close-fitting bodice and full, bouffant skirt. She also carried American beauty roses. Mrs. D. Gillespie and Mrs. Mary Pennella, the bridesmaids, were dressed in gowns similar to that worn by the maid of honor.

William Rickman, jr., brother of the bridegroom, served as best man, while the ushers were G. R. Hubbard and N. Pennella. Little Betty Gillespie was flower girl and Charles B. Pennella was ring bearer.

Following the wedding, a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents for immediate members of the families and the bridal party.

* * * *

Now on their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Herman V. Hoopes were married in Hagerstown, Md., Saturday evening. The ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Dr. J. S. Simon, of Trinity Lutheran Church of that city, took place at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Hoopes is the former Miss Miss Julia Brandt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl H. Brandt, of Hagerstown.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore white chiffon fashioned on princess lines, while her tiara of flowers corresponded with those in her bouquet. Mrs. Walter G. Lohn, of Baltimore, was her matron of honor, and Frank Higgins, of Chester, Pa., was the best man.

She is a graduate of Randolph-Macon College for Women in Lynchburg, Va., while Mr. Hoopes was educated at the University of Pennsylvania.

Legion Cotillion Sponsors Named

Patronesses have been announced for the Foreign Legion Cotillion, of Alexandria, Va., which is scheduled to take place at Boulevard Farms on Friday evening, March 11.

Other patronesses are Mrs. Joseph H. Orendorff, Mrs. Howard C. Richards, Mrs. Roger Ross, Mrs. Clarence J. Robinson, Mrs. Charles R. W. Smith, Mrs. Sydney Thomas, Mrs. Park E. Ticer, Mrs. John O. Walker, Mrs. H. Ferris White, and Mrs. Joseph W. Wyatt.

Wife of Mexican Legal Counselor

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

AS OFFICIALS of the British treasury, financial counselors on duty at the British Embassy here are not members of the diplomatic service, and so once recalled to London, seldom return. But it looks as though an exception might be made in the case of Kenneth Bewley, who formerly held that post here, and who, rumor says, is due to come back to replace Noel Trentham.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Mr. and Mrs. Bewley left Washington year ago last summer. As they were both very popular in Capital society, their return, if it comes, will be the cause of much rejoicing. When they left they thought they had said good-by to the Capital, officially speaking, forever.

NOTE: The retiring Financial Counselor of the Embassy and Mrs. Noel Trentham will be honored at a small tea to be given tomorrow afternoon by Mrs. William T. Mann in her residence on Tracy place. Mrs. Trentham is off on Friday to visit her family in Newfoundland, and will sail for England April 1 without returning to Washington. Her husband will leave about the middle of this month.

THE ENGLISH DELEGATION to draw up the Anglo-American trade treaty has arrived in Washington, and lights are burning late in the British chancery these evenings . . . They sail on Thursday on the Berengaria.

A gypsy influence has been noted at parties of late where hostesses ask for fine tellers or palmists to come in after dinner and tell the guests' characters, or futures, or both. Immediately everyone starts reading everyone else's palm while awaiting his turn with the professionals, and fascinating evenings are spent analyzing and being analyzed. A husband-and-wife combination in great demand at parties are Mr. and Mrs. H. Walker Lorenzi, who are wizards at analyzing character by studying hands.

NOVELIST, historian, and stateswoman is Mrs. Mary Agnes Hamilton, who was the week-end guest of Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor. A former member of Parliament, this versatile Englishwoman also was a member of the royal commission for civil service, and in 1933 was named governor of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

In between her many political activities, Mrs. Hamilton has found time to write several novels, of which "Less Than Dust" and "Dead Yesterday" are perhaps the best known. For recreation she likes best walking and sketching.

DR. THOMSEN, counselor of the German Embassy, will leave on Wednesday for Canada, where he hopes to get some skiing . . . Off in the other direction is Mrs. Walter White, who will leave the same day to spend several weeks in Florida . . . Mr. and Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart entertained at a dinner last evening.

Cynthia Harts, Lieut. Banister To Be Married

Daughter of General to Be Bride of Submarine Commander.

Of interest to their friends in the service set here is the announcement by Brig. Gen. and Mrs. William Wright Harts, of Madison, Conn., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Cynthia Pruden Harts, to Lieut. Alan Boyd Banister, U. S. N. The wedding will take place in Madison June 11.

Miss Harts, who was educated abroad, was graduated from the Cours du Parc in Paris. Later she attended the University of Florence, and the Academia and Miss Nixon's School, also in Florence. She attended the Stuart School in Boston and the Child-Walker School of Fine Arts, and is a member of the Boston Art Club. Present at the coronation of the former Emperor of Ethiopia, she was presented at his court.

Lieut. Banister is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy, of the class of 1928 and has recently been assigned to succeed the commander of the submarine R-2 in New London, Conn.

Miss Elizabeth Ann Rees, whose marriage to Ross Sterling Shearer will take place in the First Baptist Church, in Arlington, Va., in April, has completed her list of attendants. Miss Rees is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Rees, of Arlington, while Mr. Shearer is the son of Mrs. Thomas William Shearer, of Houston, Tex., and the late Dr. Shearer.

The matron of honor will be Mrs. Tracy E. Strevey, of Evanston, Ill., sister of the bride-elect. Bridesmaids will include Miss Betty Wyllys Stone, Miss Georgie Rucker and Miss Peggy Rucker, all of Arlington; Miss Marion Boyle and Miss Evelyn Kerr, both of Washington, and the Misses Olivita Thomas and Lenore Thomas, both of Remington, Va.

Other bridesmaids will be Miss Sudie Jones, of Newport News, Va.; Miss Kathryn Firebaugh, of Harrisonburg, Va., and Miss Eleanor Studebaker, of Luray, Va. Little Ann Hudgins, of Arlington, the niece of the prospective bridegroom, will be the flower girl, while Tracy Strevey, jr., nephew of the bride-to-be, will be the ring bearer.

Hektoens Hosts At Supper Fete

Dr. and Mrs. Ludvig Hektoen entertained at supper last evening at the Mayflower Hotel. Guests included Representative and Mrs. Edward C. Eicher, of Iowa; Surgeon General Thomas Parran of the United States Public Health Service, and Mrs. Parran, Dr. and Mrs. Hugh S. Cumming and Mrs. Luke I. Wilson.

Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Watson Davis, Mrs. E. W. Hinton, of Chicago; Dr. and Mrs. E. B. McKinley, Dr. and Mrs. Carl Voegtlin, Dr. and Mrs. Fred E. Wright and Mrs. John Herrick.

Dr. and Mrs. Hektoen received their guests in the north room of the hotel and supper was served in the east end of the Presidential dining room, with the company seated at a number of small tables. Spring flowers used for decoration were sent from Florida by Mrs. Enos Ray, of Maryland, a friend of the Hektoens, who was unable to be there.

D.C. Pen Women Hear Composer

Miss Ida Hoyt Chamberlain, lyric interpreter and composer, yesterday presented a concert in Western style—the first since her return to America from China—in the Grafton Hotel studio of the District of Columbia Branch of the National League of American Pen Women, of which she is music chairman.

Sibella, Donaudy, Chausson and a song by Sir Granville Bantock, dedicated to her, comprised her program. It included also four other of her Western style compositions and the favorite aria from her Chinese tone pictures, "One Wing'ed Bird," which she presented in Chinese costume of the T'ang dynasty. The costume was a rainbow skirt and a feather jacket. She also carried a fan tipped with peacock feathers.

"Yung Yang," was the song, written in Chinese style by Sir Granville Bantock, the great English composer, who wrote the Coronation Ode for King George VI, and dedicated it to Miss Chamberlain. Sir Granville, who will visit America again in April, was present at Miss Chamberlain's New York concert at the Master Institute in 1936, when she presented her original adaptations of ancient Chinese music for Western instruments. He dedicated "Yung Yang" to her after a study of her unique work.

Accompanying Miss Chamberlain was Dr. Edwin Earle Ferguson, pianist-composer, who made his first appearance in Washington. He included in his program two of his compositions, "Etude in C Minor," and "Pensive Mood," which were recently featured over the radio in a program of Iowa composers.

Miss Chamberlain's pupils, Miss Katherine Willis, Miss Gyneth Eagleson, Miss Isabelle Foster and Robert Rands assisted in ushering at the concert.

More than 100 members and guests attended. Mrs. W. W. Scott, reception chairman, and Miss Marguerite Merigold, the president, received, assisted by Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, first vice president, Miss Phronsie Marsh, second vice president and Mrs. Lyle Campbell, a new member of the branch, recently transferred from St. Louis.

1,500 Will Attend D. C. Dental Clinic

Hygienists and Assistants to Meet Here on Sunday.

That the dental profession offers a wide field for women is evidenced in the program planned by the Dental Hygienists Association and the Dental Assistants Association in conjunction with the Five-State Post-Graduate Clinic which opens next Sunday at the Mayflower Hotel for a four-day session.

The clinic will be attended by more than 1,500 dentists from the Eastern seaboard and also will bring to Washington a number of women who have done outstanding work in dentistry. Miss Sophie Gurvich is general chairman of the extensive program. Miss Katherine Cates is president of the association.

In addition to Miss Gurvich and Miss Cates, other local members of the Hygienists Association who will supervise clinic discussions are Miss Elinor Dodd, Miss Vivian Frederick, Miss Sylvia Hanks, and Miss Helen Briggs.

Local members of the Dental Assistants Association who will join prominent out-of-town members of the association in clinical discussions are Miss Cary Mercereau, Miss Kathleen Coberly, Miss Katherine Daly, Miss Katherine Reardon, Mrs. Olive Parsons, Mrs. Agnes Mull, Miss Margaret Biggane, and Miss Julia Schuett.

Mrs. C. K. Drury Plans to Remain Here Till Friday

Mrs. Charles K. Drury, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Armat at their place, Greystone, on Klingle road, will remain in Washington, where she has many friends, until Friday and will then return to her home. Mrs. Drury is the daughter of Mrs. William C. Redfield and the late Mr. Redfield, at one time Secretary of Commerce.

Early in March Mrs. Drury will leave for a cruise to the West Indies accompanied by her son, Mercine Drury, who will be away from Choate on spring vacation.

Mrs. Drury arrived in Washington last Friday.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

After Eight Months' Courtship, Girl and Beau Bicker Constantly; Can Harmony Be Restored?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Eight months ago I began keeping "steady company" with a boy one year my senior. (I will soon be 18.) We realized at the time that marriage was out of the question for several years, but neither of us enjoyed ourselves when "dating" others. And so for several months we were very happy together, seeing each other practically every night. Then the war—as we call it—began. It became a huge joke to us, as well as to others. We had petty fusses which ended in light fisticuffs or a spanking, and then a very big hug. Our friends joked about it, and every time we disagreed about something they would say, "Oh-oh! There they go again."

• • • •

But soon my good-natured sweetheart changed his disposition. He who had formerly been the life of the party became sulky in his attitude toward me. Things weren't going so well with him, it seemed; things having to do with his job, his schooling, etc. Soon he became careless in his everyday attentions; began to take our bickerings seriously. He was moody, suspicious and wrongfully jealous of an old boy-friend of mine who still dropped in to see me occasionally, but only as a friend.

• • • •

Soon his attitude got on my nerves and I became sulky, too. His advances to me were no longer sweet. I shooed him away several nights with words of warning about necking. He resented this. I had a long talk with him about a month ago, during which I begged him to be nicer; otherwise, I said, I would be forced to break with him. This frightened him into acting nicer for a week, after which he relapsed again into grouchiness and moodiness. He insisted if I really loved him I wouldn't mind his moods. He even went so far as to say he had a really mean disposition that he had hitherto tried to hide from me. His sense of humor was gone.

• • • •

Last night we had another talk. This time, he admonished me for my actions, saying most of our quarrels were my fault; that I was not the loving sweetheart to him that I should be. Perhaps he is right. His Dr. Jekyll, Mr. Hyde personality has rather upset me. And I still love Dr. Jekyll but I hate Mr. Hyde. Please, Miss Haworth, don't advise me to break off with him. We've had such fun together. We're both what you might call rah-rah and seldom become sentimental. People call us a "cute couple," and that is what I'd like for us to be always—"a cute couple." Not overly sensitive, moody, fussy people! LORRIE.

Purpose of Courtship.

DEAR LORRIE: One of the primary purposes of courtship, and of engagements, is to afford two persons who have been attracted to each other, ample opportunity for discovering whether they really are temperamentally and socially compatible. When such experimental association discloses fundamental incompatibility, as in your case, then the only sensible thing to do is to part company, and the sooner the better. The boy is probably telling the truth in saying he has a "really mean disposition that he had hitherto tried to hide." Prolonged association has a way of wearing every pretense threadbare; of disclosing every potential and actual source of friction between two personalities; of showing whether their natures are sympathetic, affirmative and complementary—or just the reverse. And I maintain there is no authentic compatability of temperament here.

• • • •

The principal attraction, as I apprehend it, is physical, and much of the boy's irritability is probably due to emotional repression. Yet such repression can be happily sublimated into the gayest, tenderest, most cherishing devotion, when mental and spiritual congeniality exists. The fact that his "advances are no longer sweet," that you have found it necessary to warn him repeatedly about the dangers of "necking;" the fact that he says you are not the loving sweetheart" you should be; the fact that he has "become careless in his everyday attentions," that he is "moody, suspicious and wrongfully jealous of an old boy friend," all these are storm signals warning you to break off this intimate, exclusive sweethearting association. If you go on, you will find it leading to dust and ashes; or, to change metaphors, into dangerously deep and potentially disastrous waters.

• • • •

Too young to marry, too immature to understand the emotions with which you are playing, too lacking in social experience to have any standards of comparison by which to judge your essential incompatibility, each of you is stifling his own personality and wasting time that could be much better spent, in striving to reconcile the irreconcilable. It is absurd and callow in the extreme to continue to pair off with a beau who is churlishly antagonistic, simply because your friends—not realizing the rot at the core of the relationship—label you a "cute couple."

• • • •

Since you don't wish to break off the relationship, there is but one alternative remedy for the constant bickering it engenders. And that remedy consists of changing the boy's status from "the one man in your life" to that of "one of many men in your life." In other words, tell him the strain of constant association is telling on both your nerves and dispositions, and you feel you will be happier together, and will appreciate each other more, if you see each other less and other people more. Then put your prescription to the test. By so doing, you will either rediscover each other on a new plane of understanding, or you will gradually drift apart and forget each other in happier and more congenial associations.

Spring Suits and Their Accents Go Feminine

STRIPES, extremely popular in the spring fashion picture, were used to advantage in this chic suit made of black wool with white stripes woven into the material. A suit which adapts itself smartly to various accessory changes—a grand background for twin silver foxes. The rough straw sailor (right), by Harryson, is feminized by a perky veil. Both suit and hat were shown in the Erlebacher fashion show at the Shoreham last Saturday.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Feb. 27.

THE VERY word Broadway means something glamorous, exciting and a leetle mite sinful to those who have never crossed the Hudson to see it for themselves. Well, maybe the old cow-path is all those things to the newcomer.

ALICE HUGHES.

To the old-timer who remembers Broadway at the century's turn the street is now only a rackety headache — a Coney Island without an ocean. Such a fogy points out that instead of great restaurants like Rector's and Churchill's, it is lined with juice bars, help-yourself restaurants, cheap auction dives and patent medicine deadfalls. But younger lads with a living to make on the street point out its luxurious movie cathedrals, its palatial night spots, like the Casa Manana and the International Casino. They insist that the district still reeks with glamour—even though its sidewalks are now packed with humble toilers instead of prominent clubmen in plug hats and Inverness capes!

Whatever it is, it is still the town's fun center after dark. But the stretch from Fourty-second to Fifty-ninth streets (loosely called the Times Square District) is only a very small bit of Broadway, which is a very long street indeed. My favorite part is the uptown hunk from Seventy-second street to the Harlem River, or "The Baby Buggy Belt." There Broadway is wide and sunny, lined with delicatessen stores, small dress shops and beauty parlors. In its centers are benches always filled with old folks sitting out the daily dance—its sidewalks packed with young mothers pushing go-carts, and stopping to trade neighborhood gossip. There Broadway is a real home street, and I love to roam it, counting the prams on each block. My highest is 16, on a bright day. You or anyone else can have the Time Square Broadway—I'll just take the part where mamas and tikes soak up sun and the dinner groceries, and where race-suicide is unknown. There are a dozen Broadways beside the honky-tonk bit, and mine is the go-buggy part uptown!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The night club of the season is the rumba-dive known as La Congo, established in a hitherto unlucky cellar on West Fifty-seventh street. The vittles and drink are not exceptional—but something has socked it over with a bang. Probably the current insanity for West Indian rhythms. Eleanor Powell practically lived there during her visit, and so did Marlene Dietrich. Names make news and also night clubs . . . Close behind the rumba-craze here has come the Hawaiian, or alfalfa skirt, madness in supper spots. Jazz bands once known as Mike Moak's Melody Masters have quickly become Duke Kahoho's Waikiki Wizards, and hula-hula babes wriggle all over town. Among the hundreds of authentic descendants of the Hawaiian royal family (evidently a prolific lot) is Princess Kukulei, who hula-hulas. Another fine old Hawaiian in the clubs is a pretty girl whose real nickname is "Shackles" Sullivan.

• • • •

Our British visitors never really get Americanized—they stay 100 per cent Imperial until Gabriel trumpets for them. Take pretty Muruel Dickson, now a soprano with the Met. Opera. Every day, at the tap of 4, she trots over to the Piccadilly Hotel on Forty-fifth Street, and brews a mess of tea in a pot she keeps in the kitchen there. So many fellow exiles have joined her that she now calls the Oolong Gang "The Tea and Crumpet Society."

• • • •

All is too calm again along "Hair-Do Row" at present, for Guillaume (Bill) the Great has left us. This placid little Frenchman is called tops in his trade, and this year specialized in 12 wondrous coiffures—six for day, six for evening. One of these should be able to fit and glorify every New York woman, opined Bill, if not, she might as well be bald.

Suits Feature Spring Motifs For Femininity

Three-Piece Tailored Outfits Come in Grays, Checks and Solid Tones.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

FEMININITY, the theme song in spring fashions, has been taken over by suits and accompanying accessories in a big way. With a basic suit, one can do wonders with accent changes, particularly a hat wardrobe—and each chapeau, if in a different style classification, can entirely change the character of the entire ensemble. Suits, from the softly tailored sports, and more feminine costume suits, were given ranking importance in the Erlebacher fashion show at the Shoreham Saturday. Color and fabrics, too, were exploited with the suit in all its interpretations as the smart medium for their expression.

Grays, Checks Popular.

Among the more tailored varieties were three-piece affairs in gray, combining checks and solid color tones, topped by either a boxy coat or a flattering cape of three-quarters or full-length. Another outstanding model in this category was in tones of green, worn with a wide-brimmed hat with pointed crown. Costume suits made use of the new Sung beige, from the Chinese dynasty color range; these were one-piece frocks with fitted, feminine coats trimmed with fur collars. The inevitable redingote was also much in evidence, in black, navy and beige, with printed fabrics for chic color contrast.

One-Color Theme.

For afternoon, bolero dresses made their appearance in numerous versions; one-color themes and dark costumes with two bright colors for dramatic effect. Simple navy or black crepe frocks with fitted bodices and full swing skirts were topped with fur capes short chunky boleros; these same fur wraps may be used smartly for evening. Among the evening collection, which was the finale of the fashion show, was a white marquisette dinner dress embroidered in bright red topped by a finger-tip-length jacket of white fox. A red fox cape which accompanied a brown and white patterned net evening gown also created much favorable comment among the smart audience.

New Kitchen Dresses.

For your hours in the kitchen, summer fashions show ingenious new fastenings. Three new types have been introduced, one featuring an adjustable waistline sideways zipper to fit any sized figure; another is an "open sesame"—one jerk and the whole frock opens from top to toe, and another hooverette is fashioned of two flat pieces to slip through a mangle without difficulty.

Today's HEALTH TALK

by Logan Clendening, M. D.

Shock Treatment.

We recently have been hearing a great deal about a form of treatment of certain forms of mental disease by which the mind is so disturbed that it may possibly be shocked into getting back on the tracks.

The mental disturbances in which this method has been most successful are those called the "split personalities" or "schizophenics." They are sometimes called also "dementia praecox," because they are likely to affect young people. The conditions has been rightly called "living death," because the patients draw into themselves, take no interest in the outside world, and appear to hibernate.

The substance which was first used in those cases was insulin, that remedy for diabetes which reduces sugar in the blood. When the blood sugar gets sufficiently low the body goes into shock of a severe character. After this shock period has lasted a certain length of time it is possible to restore the blood sugar to normal; to give sugar injections in the viens and the shock is stopped. In quite a good many instances the shock wakes the mind up and disturbs it so that it begins to operate in more or less normal fashion.

Probably even more remarkable than insulin has been the use of a drug called "metrazol." This makes very profound changes in the body and usually results in a convulsion if given in sufficient dosage. It is used in dementia praecox because, according to alienists, epilepsy and dementia praecox are absolutely antagonistic.

Metrazol upsets all the chemistry of the body and produces a convulsion. The hope is that when the mind begins to recover from the convulsion it will somehow throw itself back into gear.

Both of these treatments are very dangerous, but the condition of the patient is usually so desperate that death would be more welcome than a continuation of the deranged state, and most people will take the risk in order to take the chance of a good result.

Add the liver and brown. Dissolve the bouillon cube in 1 cup of hot water. Pour this over the top of the meat. Add 1 teaspoon of salt and a little pepper. Add if desired 1 teaspoon of poultry seasoning. Cover closely and simmer three-quarters of an hour, basting frequently. This amount serves five persons.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

'Everybody's Late.'

YOUR HOSTESS said come at 8:30, but that probably means 9. You are not going to rush. You are going to be late for once, yourself. You've still got this hick-town habit of dashing in five minutes after the appointed hour with your tongue hanging out. Yes, sir—this time you are going to be calm and deliberate in getting ready and you are going to arrive not a minute before 9:30—or even 10. You will breeze in nonchalantly and say blithely, "Sorry"—no "S'rry, you know I've just got this Washington habit. . . ."

It's only 7:30. You have oceans of time. You bathe leisurely. Now you will lie down with cotton pads on your eyes . . . so you will be rested, bright-eyed and fascinating. You start to turn off the light—no, you had better keep an eye on the clock.

• • • •

You had meant to rest 15 minutes, but at the end of 10 you get up. After all, you don't want to be rushed. For once you would like to leave the house without racing for a taxi and fastening your bracelet on the way.

It's five minutes past 8—still lots of time. Why, in 25 minutes—no, wait! You've got 55 minutes! You are not going to arrive until 9—or was it 9:30? Well, you'd better make it 9.

You sit at your dressing table and carefully apply you make-up. You've always smudged it on before. You've always looked like one of these women who pride themselves on dressing in a half hour.

You are still experimenting with your Cupid's bow at 8:20 and you begin to get nervous. Maybe you'd better get to your hair . . . sometimes it's a bit stubborn. No, that is sheer nonsense. What if you are a little later than 9? Women who get attention always make late and dramatic entrances . . . Still, you really need silver fox furs for that. Your old rabbit skin coat is a bit—well, maybe you HAD better get at your hair.

Your hair is in a bad mood. One little curl insists on sticking out like a horn on a heifer. You struggle and struggle, note that the clock says 8:40. Why, just a moment ago it was 8:30! Why WILL you never allow yourself more time—oh, well, what does it matter? Eveerybody else is always late. Even if you get there at 9:15, the world won't fall. You simply take things too seriously.

• • • •

It is 8:45 before your hair behaves properly. You find yourself dashing to your clothes closet. You stop. No, you WILL NOT rush. Hurry is as aging. Besides, you had planned to be late.

You find you had forgotten to fix the snapper at the back—wait, you will pin it. No, that would show. You grab your work basket. Your fingers are so nervous they will scarcely thread the neeedle. You get panicky, vision yourself straggling in as the guests are departing . . . the program over . . . the refreshments gone.

Now, now, that will never do, you tell yourself. It's just your old Puritan conscience heckling you. Everybody'll respect you more if you are late . . . think you are more important.

You try to put on your dress leisurely. "Everybody's always late," you keep telling yourself pantingly. It's just your old inferiority complex that makes you feel so guilty.

You get your girdle hooked wrong—oh, well, you can fix that in the cab. You fasten your evening slippers loosely—you'll adjust them later. You look at the clock. It says 9! You swoop your earrings and bracelet into your evening bag, throw your coat loosely over your shoulders and rush from the house.

• • • •

It is 9:10 when you arrive at the party. You dash up to the hostess. "Oh, I'm SO sorry——" you gasp.

"Oh, that's all right," she replies. "Scarcely anybody has gotten here yet." You glance around the room. There are about six elderly arrivals making the rounds of the etchings.

Male Beach Attire Hits a Novel High

New York, (AP).—Hold your hats—here comes the 1938 crop of Southern resort clothes for men, hitting a new high in the novel and wacky.

Then there are dressing gowns made of upholstery fabric—don't ask why—non-leopard-skin swimming trunks made of corduroy, and shirts and pants made of sailcloth.

If that doesn't seem exotic enough, there are shirts made, allegedly, of flag bunting, with pockets across the front like a carpenter's apron.

Then there's a tricky little outfit calculated to make a man look like a beachcomber, in case he wants to. It has shirt sleeves and trouser legs frayed into tatters, on purpose.

When you get into footwear, anything's liable to happen. One thing that does is sandals made of hand-woven chamois—the stuff you polish windows with.

The cyclone hit neckties, too. To be the necktie life of the party you're supposed to wear a bow tie made of hat-band ribbon with ends 3 inches across.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

IN SEEKING to relieve sinusitis, science has come across what seems to be the magic medicine for reducers. This new drug is a benzine derivative which curbs appetite and stimulates activity, and it has been found an important aid in the treatment of overweight.

According to the report published in the New England Journal of Medicine, in addition to decreasing appetite, this drug so increases the sense of well-being and of energy that physical activity is spontaneously accelerated. Most of the research on the drug has been credited to Dr. Abraham Meyerson, of Boston.

Although the drug has been the subject of several years' study, its value in weight reduction has only recently been given importance. The stimulating effects of the drug were discovered when patients under treatment for sinusitis noted a mental lift. Later this stimulation was found a great aid to overweight patients in that it abolished the ill-timed craving for food which is so often the direct cause of obesity. In many instances, obesity habits root in restlessness and dissatisfaction. Constant nibbling is, in a way, an escape and continual eating inevitably leads to overweight. As pointed out by the reports, the usefulness of the drug is not confined to this type of obesity. It has been effective in the treatment of all types of overweight, but its use is not advised in cases of overweight complicated by high blood pressure.

This drug can be obtained only upon the prescription of your doctor and must be used under expert medical supervision. It certainly has no place in the field of home remedies, since overdoses in untrained hands produce extreme nervousness and insomnia.

Like many other drugs, this benzine derivative is termed an adjuvant. It will not do the reducing for you and it must be used in conjunction with a low calorie diet . . . And, as I have told you before, without exercise you will not lose weight in the right spots. There is no substitute for diet and exercise to bring the weight to normal and beautify the figure, but this adjuvant does supply a feeling of exhilaration which sends you merrily on your way reducing.

You will be interested to know that one reducer who was placed on the drug—and the balanced low calorie diet—lost 45 pounds in 25 weeks. The drug helped her to stay on her diet and consequently weight was lost on schedule.

Use no reducing medicine unless your doctor prescribes it.

Appetite and lack of will power are the stumbling blocks in most reducing programs and this drug seems to make it easier to stay on a restricted diet. The real cure of obesity, however, is to eat sensibly and take a normal amount of exercise. There is no sidestepping these weight control factors.

NERVES
FREE Millions of people are suffering from "nerves" and don't know it. Scientists have recently proven that many conditions of nervousness such as neuralgia, neuritis, insomnia, fatigue, loss of appetite, constant worry, constipation and many muscular aches and pains are due to lack of certain vital food substances, which, when taken by the sufferer, give amazing relief. Neural-Aid, an inexpensive, DRUGLESS preparation contains these all-important food elements. Sufferers who clip this ad and bring it in can obtain a FREE SAMPLE of Neural-Aid and full information.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

One of the few surprises in President Roosevelt's series of newspaper and magazine articles next month will be his official contention that he won a great victory in his Supreme Court fight, instead of suffering his first big defeat, as many an ignorant layman believes.

* * * *

Mrs. Barnett. . . . Wally's model?

Roughly, the explanation will take the "You should have seen the other fellow" line—two Justices were stampeded into resignation, the others O.K.'d laws they would have torn to shreds before the bombardment from the White House.

* * * *

Too late to influence the new farm law one way or the other, a doctor out in the hinterland telegraphed to Senator Gillette, of Iowa, a suggestion that might have revolutionized the bill a week or two earlier. The telegram:

"—the doctor's tardy hint"

"Haven't read farm control law in its entirety . . . We can't help wondering if farmer is allotted one calf and cow has twins, whether law specifies that the officials shoot a calf, the cow, the farmer or the bull . . . Suggestion medical profession having success using contraceptives."

* * * *

After showing the telegram to a number of learned Senators on the floor, Senator Gillette wired back that the proper course would be to shoot the farmer's Senator. He ignored the medical suggestion as impractical.

Mrs. Cummings. . . . 25c a word?

* * * *

Some Washingtonians vow that the Duchess of Windsor has borrowed some of her charming mannerisms from Mrs. General Barnett, widow of the late Marine Corps commander . . . Mrs. Barnett is famous for her wit and her fetching little ways, and some who have seen the Duchess abroad the last few years insist they have recognized not only Barnett gestures and grace notes, but even Barnett epigrams in Her Highness' conversation.

* * * *

"—it was a famous victory"

The literary ante for scribbling by official Washington keeps rising . . . The pace is set, of course, by the fabulous prices per word commanded by White House authors; and now the 15-cents-a-word figure in which Mrs. Senator Royal Copeland so charmingly confesses has been topped by a 25-cent-a-word offer laid on the desk of Cecelia Cummings, wife of the Attorney General . . . And if she wrote as she talks it would be worth it.

* * * *

PAT HARRISON,
Who's that tall man whose serious mien
A smile will never wreck,
With little hair on top his bean,
And lots along his neck?
He seeks not humor nor romance,
To waste time drives him dippy:
The Senate's Chairman of Finance,
That's Pat from Mississippi.
SENATOR X.

* * * *

The Capital's connoisseurs of the inside wheels of government don't waste much time on the deliberation of the House and Senate; they shop around for the more exciting committee hearings . . .

There the members let their hair down in an informal atmosphere, as they question a giddy parade of celebrities . . . A hearing on a navy bill or a venereal bill draws a Standing-Room-Only matinee crowd at 10:30 a. m., and some of the handsomer Senators have their following among the feminine committee fans.

Union Accuses Hotel Of 'Unfair Practices'

Charges of unfair labor practices have been filed with the National Labor Relations Board against the Raleigh Hotel by the Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance. James McNamara, business agent, claimed the hotel used "coercion" in having employes sign a petition "which discourages the membership of its employes in the Hotel and Restaurant Employes International Alliance."

Pastor Scores Business' Use Of the Church

Metropolitan Baptist Marks Its Sixtieth Anniversary.

Congregational Minister Approves Oxford Group Movement.

Threatened "commercialization" of the church was attacked yesterday by Dr. John Compton Ball, speaking at Metropolitan Baptist Church, Sixth and A streets northeast, on the sixtieth anniversary of its founding.

Denouncing attempts of private firms to use churches to their own advantage, Dr. Ball told his congregation of 1,250 persons that "I am constantly receiving letters from different agencies asking me to permit the sale, through some organization of our church, of advertised products, which range all the way from Christmas cards to cemetery lots."

"Jesus Christ said, 'My house shall be called a house of prayer,'" Dr. Ball continued, "and I do not believe in making it a place of merchandise."

The only remaining constituent member of the church, Mrs. Marion J. McLean, was in yesterday's audience and was asked by Dr. Ball to rise and "take a bow." Her husband, the late Francis McLean, who became clerk, was the church's first convert.

Approval of the Oxford Group Movement was expressed yesterday by Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of First Congregational Church, in a sermon before the largest Sunday morning congregation of the year.

At an evening symposium on "Religion and Democracy," Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, stated that genuine democracy was impossible unless it was based on religion. He said that "the confusion in the world today is the result of lack of faith in the teachings of Jesus Christ."

Although the Oxford Group movement received unfavorable publicity when it was in its "infancy," Dr. Anderson said, it has now reached maturity. It stands, he pointed out, "for absolutes as against equivocation; for recognition that we have been sinners as against the psychological pap with which we have been excusing ourselves; for faith and prayer as against selfsufficiency and scientific pride; for unselfishness and loyalty as against the modern tendency to be greedy and hateful."

Dr. John F. B. Carruthers, of Pasadena, Calif., preached yesterday from the same pulpit in Covenant-First Presbyterian Church that he occupied 21 years ago when he delivered a farewell sermon before going to France as a war chaplain.

Reviewing a recent biography of Mme. Curie, Dr. Carruthers said the noted French scientist lost her religious faith because a member of the clergy had misinterpreted the early death of her mother, to whom she was deeply attached. Then, when her husband died, "she was unable to go through the dark wall of sorrow because of the fragile weakness of mere human strength," Dr. Carruthers declared.

Democracy is menaced not only by totalitarian states on the outside but by negligent citizens within, declared Dr. H. W. Burgan yesterday in a sermon at Hamline Methodist Episcopal Church on "The American Flag."

The "growing tendency" of failure to exercise the right of franchise, unwillingness of righteous men to assume obligations of office and the crime-breeding delusion that liberty means license all are threats to American democracy, Dr. Burgan warned.

On the fifth anniversary of his rectorship at St. Mark's Episcopal Church, the Rev. William R. Moody yesterday preached on the practicality of religion.

"Christianity demands unselfish giving of oneself," he stated. "No worship is fully Christian which does not have as its end and result a life dedicated to God."

Speaking on "The Sin of Being Ordinary," Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden declared at First Baptist Church yesterday that "the Christian has no right to behave like an ordinary man."

Dr. Pruden asserted that "the Christian regards his duty as an opportunity, keeps God in constant remembrance, is capable of spiritual instruction, will not condone sin and stands up firmly on promises of God."

11 Birthdays Celebrated at Home for Aged As Youngsters Play for Crippled Musician

Abe Eisenberg, 80, and Mrs. Sylvia Podnos, 90, were among nine residents of the Hebrew Home honored last night at a birthday party at the home. They are shown, with Miss Hilda Zetzer, of the Baltimore Music Club (center), who led the entertainment with a group of songs.

Seven birthdays were celebrated all at once last night at the Hebrew Home for the Aged.

Nine of the birthdays were those of residents of the home who were born in February, but the celebration was extended to include the anniversaries of Abraham Lincoln and George Washington.

Luckiest one of the eight present for the party was Joseph Chosack, 64-year-old former music teacher. For one thing, yesterday was actually his birthday.

More important, one of his former music students, Florence Pargment, 14, came to the party with other young musicians to play for the group. She played a Polish dance on the piano, and also accompanied Kenny Eisenberg, 12-year-old violinist, of 1238 Pennsylvania avenue northeast, in three selections.

Chosack, crippled in recent years with paralysis, was before his illness a talented musician. He played with the orchestra at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York City, toured the East in concert performances, and later taught music here.

In his honor, the major part of the birthday celebration was devoted to music. Beside his former pupil, and the young violinist, Frieda Bass, 15, 1335 Rittenhouse street northwest, and Hilda Zetzer, of the Baltimore Music Club, offered several selections.

Miss Zetzer, a graduate of Peabody Conservatory of Music, sang a group of Russian songs, in costume, accompanied by Florette Gorfine, also of Baltimore.

Other residents of the home who celebrated their birthday were Sylvia Podnos, 90; Mrs. Annie Kammerow, 60; Hyman Kovler, 76; Max Themper, 69; Mrs. Fannie Lowe, 88; Mrs. Etta Simon, 74; Abe Eisenberg, 80, and Mrs. Jennie Witznagel, 70.

District Shivers As Winds Drive Mercury Down

Caught in the fringe of a northwest gale moving across New York, Washington last night shivered under temperatures driven down into the twenties. Today will be cloudy and cold, with light rains early in the day, the Weather Bureau predicted.

Until 10:30 p. m. the thermometer ranged yesterday between a high of 45 degrees and a low of 36, but began dropping rapidly under pressure of high winds which swooped down on the city shortly before midnight. Reports from nearby Maryland were that limbs had been torn from many trees, though no reports were received of damage in the District.

Taking advantage of slightly premature March weather cost Carl Blackwell, 12, of 329 Thirteenth street northwest injuries to his head, wrist and back when he fell from a tree which he had climbed to retrieve a kite. At Casualty Hospital his condition was said not to be serious.

D. C. Mother Dog Sent by Air Saves 5 Boston Puppies

Boston, Feb. 27 (AP).—Five little English cocker spaniels tonight were snug and warm, nursing on a foster mother rushed to their aid from a Washington, D. C., "dog hotel" by specially chartered airplane.

One of a litter of six had died and the others, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Eugene W. Owen, of Sherborn, whimpered hungrily to a mother that could not feed them as Pilot Al Lechscherd took off from Boston airport on his errand of mercy last night.

"Sally," the hired foster mother, slept most of the way from Washington to Boston and fulfilled her first official duty at the Sherborn Kennel early today.

The valuable puppies, Mrs. Owen declared, concluded their fifth day of life tonight with a "hearty meal" and slipped off into a healthy sleep as both mother and foster mother cuddled around to keep them warm.

Bosses Driving Men to Politics, Mediator Says

Employers Stand to Lose by Failing to Heed Laws, Dr. Leiserson Warns.

Refusal of certain employers to abide by labor relations laws is driving their employes into politics, Dr. William M. Leiserson, member of the National Mediation Board, asserted yesterday at a meeting of the Modern Forum in the Washington Hotel.

"This is the worst policy employers can pursue," Dr. Leiserson said. "Labor, after all, has more votes."

Conceding that employers are justly indignant when labor trespasses on their property with such tactics as the sit-down strike, the speaker stated that "employers frequently trespass on their employes' chief property right—the right to bargain collectively."

"The NLRA is a law to protect property rights of wage-earners, which are few enough," he said.

Discussing proposed modifications of the national labor relations act and charges that the measure is "one-sided," Dr. Leiserson stated he had no objection to an amendment preventing the employe from interfering with his employer's right "to join the Chamber of Commerce or Iron and Steel Institute."

Mgr. Francis J. Haas, head of the department of sociology at Catholic University and recently named to the Wisconsin Labor Relations Board, said that many employers have habitually "delegated their thinking" on the vital subject of labor relations to subordinate company officials or attorneys.

Newly organized labor cannot be expected to act immediately in a "smooth and disciplined way," Mgr. Haas said.

State labor boards perform a useful "educational" function, he believes, in bringing employers and employes into frequent conference.

Boy Hit by Auto, Another Injured As Cars Collide

Bobby Daniels, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Daniels, of 23 Rosemont avenue, Alexandria, Va., was injured last night by an automobile driven by Joe Fagelson, of 507 Russell road, Alexandria. Police said the boy was struck when he ran across the street at Russell road and Rosemont avenue.

He was taken to Alexandria Hospital, where he was unconscious several hours after the accident. His condition is undetermined. Fagelson was not held.

James Pitcher, 4, of 1414 U street southeast, was injured yesterday when the car in which he was riding with his father, Raymond W. Pitcher, collided with another auto operated by William J. Henkerson, colored, at Second and Florida avenue northwest. The child was treated at Sibley Hospital for head lacerations and released.

Federal Income Levy Urged as Tax Bill Basis

A proposed tax bill for the District, based on the amount of Federal income tax paid, will be presented before the House Committee on Fiscal Affairs today by the Citizens Committee on Fair Taxation.

The committee is opposed to the sales tax and business privilege tax and will recommend an income tax based on one-sixth of Federal tax paid on income made in the District. The committee is composed of representatives of a number of citizen's associations and Government organizations.

Greatest Navy Asked for U.S. By Marcosson

Writer Says General War in Europe Is Quite Remote.

Isaac F. Marcosson, magazine writer, urged a Town Hall audience last night to support the President's rearmament program and declared that the United States, with two coasts to defend, needs the greatest Navy in the world.

The need is the greater, he said, because the British rearmament program will not be complete until 1940 and because Britain's recent overtures to Italy indicate she is turning in that direction for an ally instead of toward the United States. He warned that this country cannot be smugly complacent about its impregnability.

Declaring that "dictators are double-crossers," Marcosson explained that an Anglo-Italian alliance might be a salutary thing because it would tend to break up the Rome-Berlin axis. He said that it might be more to Mussolini's interest to have a friend in Great Britain than an ally in Germany.

Holds War Remote.

Marcosson sees only remote likelihood of a general European war. He said that working against such a possibility are two factors: countries realize they wouldn't have much chance of winning a material victory; no country can count on an ally.

The present paradox of a peace which exists while millions of men are under arms he blamed on the Treaty of Versailles and on its framing by "politicians instead of statesmen." From the day that it went into effect, he said, every economic issue became a political one.

Saying that population increases have driven dictator countries toward aggression, Marcosson declared that "a syndicate of Margaret Sangers in Japan would do more toward preserving peace in the East than all the statesmen in the world."

Puts Il Duce at Top.

He said that "bluff, brag and bluster" is the motto of every dictator; that "the times are histrionic as well as historic;" that "fear is international public enemy No. 1;" that Mussolini is the "world's only No. 1 dictator."

In analyzing dictators, and Marcosson has interviewed every post-war dictator but Hitler, he pointed out that none of them can stand criticism. He pointed out, too, that they must constantly be taking some action or other and cannot afford to be static. This necessity he blamed for Nazi activity in Austria in the last ten days.

Mussolini, he considered, is the only intelligent dictator now in power and is the only one with the makings of a prudent statesman.

Japanese Overrated.

Marcosson said he was the only journalist ever to have interviewed the Emperor of Japan. He drew partly upon this experience to prove that "the Japanese are the most overestimated people in the world" and that if "you scratch a Japanese you find a feudal barbarian."

Asked by Frederick William Wile, panel member, whether "American isolationism must bear a share of the responsibility for the decline of democracy," Marcosson replied that "if England turns to Italy we must continue a policy of armed isolationism." He said there already are "Fascist seedlings" in Brazil.

Representative Harry Sauthoff (Progressive), Wisconsin, another panel member, objected to the speaker's implication that dictators are the sole practitioners of the double-cross. He contended that Great Britain is the greatest master of the art.

In answer to questions by Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, new chairman of the Unites States Maritime Commission, Marcosson said Hitler could be overthrown only when "empty stomachs rattled" inside the German people and that the Japanese are overestimated because they have never fought a first-class

Cut Digits Fail to Stop Man's Potato Peeling

James Smith lets nothing like a couple of gashed fingers interfere with his potato peeling.

Smith, 28, was peeling potatoes yesterday at his home, 1446 Half street southwest, when he cut the two middle fingers of his left hand. He went to Providence Hospital, where the fingers were treated.

"He returned to the above address," said the police report, ending on a hopeful note, "and resumed peeling potatoes."

Love Worries Lead Man to More Trouble

Goes South to Forget, Faces Parking Charge on Return

Murray A. Doren, 20, of Memphis, Tenn., blames it all on love.

Doren, a salesman for a Southern refrigerator company, one day decided to forget his troubles d'amour and take a little trip.

He arrived in Washington on Lincoln's Birthday, parked his car near the Capitol and walked down to the Highway Bridge. There he discarded his good clothes under a culvert for an old suit bought at a second hand store.

Then he walked to the Lee highway and started thumbing rides to Palm Beach, which, he decided, was the ideal place for a man with love troubles.

Doren soon tired of Palm Beach and headed back for Washington for his car. On the way, he stopped at Charlottesville, Va., and wired his parents for money.

Meanwhile, Washington police impounded his car for overtime parking. They also waited for him to appear at the telegraph office to collect his money at the request of his parents.

Doren was arrested on a charge of illegal parking. Until the fine is paid, police said, he will have to remain as a guest of the District.

Wire Union to Ask Hearing on Ruling

Demand for a hearing before the National Labor Relations Board on a decision setting a national collective bargaining election in the Postal Telegraph Co. will be filed today, the American Radio Telegraphists' Association, Committee for Industrial Organization affiliate, announced yesterday.

The association questioned the board's proviso that it drop preferential clauses already in contracts with the company until after the election. The agreement now in effect covers Postal Co. offices in 24 cities and three States.

First Lady Has No Fear Of Radicals

Believes U. S. Has as Many Fascists as Communists.

But Neither Alarming While Democracy Fills People's Needs.

By the United Press

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt believes there are as many Fascists as Communists in the United States, but that neither group presents a real menace at the present time.

The First Lady's views—including an observation that political patronage is not essential to party organization—were expressed last night in her "question and answer" page of the March issue of the Democratic Digest.

At the same time she warned that the development of civil service must be accomplished in such a manner that competition will be retained as an incentive to making the individual efficient.

No Fear of Radicals.

Of Communists and Fascists, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"I have no fear of either group as long as our own form of government on the whole meets the needs of our people. People do not decide to change their form of government unless they are convinced that under its auspices that cannot obtain a life which is worth living."

Asked, "Do you think that establishing civil service in State and National government will weaken political party organization?" She said:

"I have always found that the idea that the giving of patronage was the only way to build up party strength was a fallacy. Over and over again, I have seen it happen that in the places where the greatest number of jobs were handed out, the party fared badly on election day.

"We are reaching a point where party organization is strong, not because of benefits handed out to individuals, but because the party principles and its tangible achievements have been approved by the people as a whole.

Fears Machine Life.

"The establishment of civil service seems to me a good thing, but I think we should always watch to make sure that in developing civil service, we do not develop a machine in itself which allows people to do the minimum of work because competition is nonexistent."

Answering other questions, Mrs. Roosevelt gave the follow views:

The Federal Government should increase its research and laboratory work in health, but doctors and the public should co-operate to devise ways to enable the poor to pay for their medical care;

The "increasing interest" which intelligent women are taking in politics makes for a more permanent democracy;

"Whether the desire (to remain at peace) can keep us out of war, no one can tell."

Sylvia Sidney Proves Docile WhenCornered

Allegedly Temperamental Star Merely Abhores Gold Fish Bowl.

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, Feb. 27.—Having heard that Miss Sylvia Sidney was one of the most tempestous, temperamental, difficult-to-be-interviewed actresses in Hollywood, we climbed into our suit of chain mail today, banged on her door and awaited the worst.

Results weren't what we expected. Miss Sidney turned out to be a gracious, well-mannered young woman, in smoked glasses, red lipstick and modest black dress. She offered us a chair and a smoke and turned out to be so gentle, that after a bit we even took off our armor plate and parked it on the rug.

Miss Sidney said the only thing she's got against interviewers is that they're always getting her married to somebody who isn't even interested.

"The last time was only a few days ago," she said, as she worked on a piece of embroidery to decorate her Connectcut farmhouse. "Somebody must have seen me kiss George Raft on the set or something, because first thing I knew people were calling me to know about our marriage.

A Raft of Rumors.

"At first I laughed. Then pretty soon my mother called long distance and asked me was it true? 'Was what true?' I wanted to know. She said she'd read that I'd married Mr. Raft. She wanted to know what was the matter with me and pretty soon I got mad. And then the newspapers here started phoning me and then I did get angry."

Miss Sidney, who's now getting a divorce from Bennett Cerf, New York publisher, isn't exactly in a position to marry anyone. She said when, as, and if she does, she'll announce it and we said that would be good enough for us.

As for her kissing Raft, she was getting paid for that. It was a scene in the picture, "You And Me," which she is making for Paramount. For the ninth time she's playing the part of an underworld moll. Usually she's a gangster's gal, but this time she's a paroled lawbreaker, who has her own troubles going straight.

She said that as soon as the picture was finished, she intended to return to New York and stay there until Hollywood has another job for her to do.

In A Gold Fish Bowl.

"The reason is that I don't like Hollywood," she said. "I feel like that general who used to run the NRA. He said he intended to operate in a gold fish bowl. I'm in that bowl every minute. I'm out here, and its no fun.

"Even the restaurants here—the good ones, I mean—seem to be designed to embarrass acting people. They're arranged so you can't get in or out without being beseiged with people who want your autograph.

"In New York it's different. I can walk along the streets there and nobody knows me. Even if they do recognize me, they don't pay any attention. I can live normally there, just like any other girl. Here I have to be on parade all the time.

"So I have no home in Hollywood. I live in a hotel while I'm here and I get away as quickly as I can."

The only barbaric touch about Miss Sidney, insofar as we could discover, was the brassy jingle of three charm bracelets, every time she moved her left arm. These bracelets are covered with geegaws and doo-dads, which fans and friends have sent her from all over the world.

Horses, Horses, Horses,

That's one way to make friends with her. Send her a miniature gadget to put on her bracelets. We didn't have a thing in this line, except an imitation ivory horse off a whisky bottle, and she already had one of those.

Miss Sidney has had an off-again-on-again movie career. She came here during the early days of the talkies and fizzled badly.

She went back to Broadway and spent five more years on the stage until eventually in 1930 she reached stardom in "Bad Girl."

B. P. Schulberg, then production manager at Paramount—and currently doing nothing at all—discovered her all over again. Since then she has appeared in 17 pictures. Virtually all of them made money. Some, including "An American Tragedy," "Street Scene," "Jennie Gerhardt," and "Dead End" were outstanding artistic successes.

Paul Kelly Signed In Character Role

Paul Kelly has been signed for the important character role of John Doyle in "Island in the Sky," which completes the casting of the Manhattan melodrama nov in production.

Gloria Stuart and Michael Whalen have the other top parts in the picture. Kelly last appeared at Twentieth Century-Fox with Claire Trevor in "Song and ance Man." He has just finished a part in Warner Brothers' "Torchy Blane in Panama."

New Playwrights Are Brought to Light In Second Bureau of New Plays Contest

Several Scripts Are Believed Suitable for Stage in Professional Production; Miss Skinner Sets a New High in Capital; Keith's Resumes Normal Schedules; Venezuela Gets a Boost; Notes of the Theater.

WITH a play from its first competition scheduled for production by the Theater Guild next year, the Bureau of New Plays, founded in 1936 by the seven major motion-picture producing companies, is now reviewing the last of the 159 scripts submitted in the hope of winning awards, fellowships and scholarships by college students since last October in the bureau's second play competition. The scripts will be turned over to the panel of final judges to be announced next week. The awards will be announced on March 15.

BELL.

The preliminary survey of the new plays submitted in this second heat of the playwriting tourney, released by Bureau Director Theresa Helburn, reveals some interesting results. Scripts were submitted from every letter in the alphabet, in a manner of speaking, beginning with one from Alberta, Canada, and ending with three from Yale, and even one from the University of the Philippines, in Manila.

In this second try at the ticklish business of compounding a worthy drama, the distaff side of the continent's embryo authors came to life with renewed vigor, 32 per cent of the scripts being from women, as against 28 per cent last year. Scripts from men fell proportionately from 72 per cent to 67 per cent.

Rising interest on the part of graduate students in the Bureau of New Plays awards is indicated by the 29 per cent of plays by graduate students submitted this year, as against 16 per cent last year, while undergraduate scripts fell from 36 per cent last year to 29 per cent this.

This year seems also to record a much higher standard of writing than last year. Miss Hepburn, one of the moving spirits in the conduct of the Theater Guild, one of the most formidable producing organizations in the American theater, states that she is much encouraged by several scripts which show definite promise of eventual production in the professional theater.

Let me see, isn't there an old manuscript buried somewhere in that ancient trunk up in the attic?

A new record was set by Cornelia Otis Skinner at the National Theater last week with "Edna His Wife." The gross receipts for the week aggregated something in excess of $12,000. That is by no means a negligible week for a touring attraction with a full cast of characters and an elaborate production. Never before, I think, has Miss Skinner scored more than an $8,000 or $9,000 week in the National Capital. The extra holiday matinee helped, of course—and all of the three matinee performances were sellouts—but, even so, I am glad to have been among the first to insist that Miss Skinner's talents are such as to warrant a "week's stand" in any literate community, with a fair chance of matching the gross of any offering on tour. Vindication may have come a little late, but it finally got here.

A word of warning to the youngsters of the City of Washington who have been planning to drag their parents out at the crack of dawn to view Walt Disney's Technicolor production of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," at RKO-Keith's Theater:

Beginning today, Manager Hardie Meakin, of Keith's, is reverting to the normal house schedules that will project the first showing of the feature at 10:45 a. m., instead of the hideous hour of 9, or thereabouts.

This, needless to say, will be in the nature of a boon to the elders who like that extra hour's sleep—as who does not?—but may cause a few frowns to wrinkle on the brows of the kids. At any rate, there it is, and don't say I didn't tell you.

Get there at 9 and you'll only have to stand out in the cold, if this weather we've been having can squeeze in under the name of "cold." But I would get there by 10:30 if I were you, because "Snow White" is still packing 'em in. And why not?

Perhaps there is a flaw in our statistics, or our money, or something. Comes a note from W. D. Groesbeck, 400 South Glebe road, Arlington, Va., under date of February 24, anent our recent comments upon that cruise taken by the Messrs. Engel and Dikeman, in which something was said about the currently high prices of things in Venezuela. Here it is:

"Dear Mr. Bell: Here is another glimpse of Caracas, which might have been a postcard, but isn't. It was taken December 22, 1937, from the terrace of the President's House. We paid $4, American, that day for a very ordinary luncheon at the Pavilion de Hipodromo. But why kick, when our 59-cent dollars are shown up in a country that uses real gold-standard money and one which has used her natural resources to discharge all her national debt, both external and internal. That is efficient statesmanship. We were told that Caracas is only 8 miles from La Guayra in an air line; 21 miles, or 36 kilometers, by a wonderfully scenic and beautifully concrete-paved road, well guard-railed at every dangerous place."

The "glimpse of Caracas," to which reference is made, seems to have been taken from Miraflores, overlooking the Ponte de Hierro. About the mileage, maybe they have moved Caracas over toward the sea since I was there, back about the turn of the century!

Recently we ran too long a column devoted exclusively to old friends appearing in Jimmy Fidler's short subject called "Personality Parade." That column was reproduced in M.-G.-M.'s "Short Story" magazine and circulated to all of the company's outlets here and abroad. It also inspired a considerable number of inquiries as to where the film might be seen after it left the Palace screen. Well, it can be seen tomorrow and next day at the Warner Brothers' Home Theater. Not that it matters.

Man Saves Pooch; Pooch Saves Man

Guyina Dogsuit has paid a debt to Donald Briggs.

A few days ago the young featured player saved Guyina, a mongrel pup and was immediately attracted to it. Because the pooch looked just like a Guyina Dogsuit, Don named it that. The vet, who shares the actor's love of animals, was glad to be spared the task of putting it to sleep.

Recently Briggs, sleeping alone in his home, was awakened by the frenzied barking of the pup. He smelled smoke and upon investigation found a radio blazing merrily in the living room. The blaze, which was extinguished with a bucket of water, apparently had started from a short circuit caused by defective wiring.

Morris and Ferguson offer lots in the way of good and original comedy, the former's best contributions being in the "Dictator" and "Prize Fighter" sketches, while the latter's grotesque and humorous character portrayal of the "Invisible Man" proves one of the most amusing things on the entire bill.

Miss Slane, who is making her initial bow here this season, is still the charming personality who made such an instant hit on her first visit to this theater. Offering several popular songs and beauty parades, Sunya is at her best in this extravaganza.

Charley Harris, who has turned out to be one of the best character actors on the circuit, adds much to the production's merit with his excellent work in the many scenes abounding throughout the revue, while Billy Crooks' ability as a straight man is entirely worthy of the sincerity he gives the part. Incidentally, Mr. Crooks shows a surprisingly fine voice in the several musical numbers he renders.

The Five Tiny Rosebuds, who, we are informed, are late of Billy Watson's "Beef Trust" chorus, cavort their extreme avoirdupois around the stage in an amazingly graceful dance routine and climax their offering with an interpretation of the "Big Apple" that isn't at all bad.

Marion Mason, who is "pretty as a picture," contributes some of her best ballet dancing, while Mary Murray proves herself a grand "talking woman" and comedienne in the comedy numbers in which she appears. Marie Dee, a dark-eyed brunette recently elevated from the chorus, proves with her looks and figure that the promotion was not a mistake.

The setting and lighting effects are up to par, and, thank goodness, the "ladies of the ensemble" are a definite improvement, both in looks and ability, over their sisters of last week's show.

Heavy Thinker.

Marie Wilson, who has made quite a success of portraying not-so-bright girls on the screen, is an authority on politics, government problems and economics. She is an inveterate newspaper reader—but always scans the funnies first.

Never Lends.

Jane Wyman consistently refuses to loan money to even her most intimate friends but will go out of her way to help pals in need. That's why she has so many intimate friends.

Little

Amkino has not been heard of on the local screen for some time now. Yesterday, at the Little Theater, it bobbed up again with an imposing motion-picture production which abandons, at least for the time being, the vital Soviet matter of political propaganda and devotes itself to a picturization of some of the most stirring events in Russian history. The title of the film is "Peter the First" and its contents are dedicated to a pictorial recital of the manner in which Russia was rescued from the Dark Ages and made a world power.

"Catherine the Great," "The Scarlet Empress" and other notable films have dealt with similarly significant aspects of the Russian emergence, but none perhaps with the rounded fullness of this release which was winner of the Paris Exposition's highest cinema award at the time of its original presentation.

The picture is more than a little spectacular. It weaves into the integral structure of its narrative an impressive sequence of a flood in St. Petersburg, the war with Sweden, a grand ball at the Imperial Palace and other equally flamboyant expositions of epochal occurrences in the Russian histories. The film was directed by Vladimir Petrov and was derived from the novel by Alexei Tolstoy.

The title role is played by Nikolai Simonov, with a well-blended combination of these histrionic endowments that made both Charles Laughton and Emil Jannings figures of note on the American screen. As its feminine star, "Peter the First" has Alla Tarasova, who was a star of the Moscow Art Theater's production of "Anna Karenina." There are thousands of secondary and subsidiary players in the ensemble that marks this as one of the foremost productions of the greatest Russian plant devoting its talents and its energies to the fabrication of film plays that have a definitely sound dramatic purpose at their base.

Forbids Haircut.

Bobby Jordan hasn't had a real haircut since going on the stage. He keeps it long and lank, occasionally singeing the ends. Declaring his hair is his stock in trade, he had a clause forbidding shears written into his Warner contract for "Crime School."

In Hollywood With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 27.—Our motion picture producers who have assumed that Marlene Dietrich is through and have chatted about it merrily, instead of taking advantage of their opportunity, are in for an awful sock when Marlene signs that million dollar radio contract.

HEDDA HOPPER.

Assuming that a girl is through just because she doesn't have a picture assignment is a lot of poppy-cock. If Hollywood doesn't use her, they seem to think no one else will.

But Marlene is front-page news in every language in the world. Heaven only knows what columnists would do without her. She's been built up as the siren of the century. Four hundred and fifty thousand dollars a picture. Largest price ever paid. That sort of thing isn't slap-happy chance.

The public wants to know where she goes, what she wears, the jewelry she possesses, what she eats, how she brushes her teeth, curls her eyelashes. If she puts on an extra pound, will she starve or be slapped? If she's seen more than once with a man, he's her "boy friend." If a station wagon filled with flowers, driven by a titled Englishman, stops at her house, will the daisies tell? No. But Hedda Hopper will.

What do they expect her to do? Sit home in a flannel nightgown and read "Live Alone and Like It?" Marlene is just a fun-loving girl, with a grand sense of humor, devoted to her daughter and the best cook in town. Yesterday she looked like an Italian sunset, with stripes going round and round, instead of up and down. At her neck she wore a bow-knot of narrow loops of gold, held together with rubies and diamonds. And her ring was a huge diamond set in a ball of gold.

The Warner Brothers party at the Biltmore was noteworthy due to the masterly work by Rudy Vallee as master of ceremonies. There's nothing flip or brash in Rudy's work. And those who laughed loudest and longest over his song, "Mad Dogs and Englishmen," were Englishmen!

Most of the girls looked like trappers' brides in silver foxes.

If Mrs. Basil Rathbone put on a diving suit and went to the bottom of the sea, she'd come to the surface with a musician in either hand. Or so it seemed when I was invited for cocktails to meet Mr. and Mrs. Parr, from Baltimore, owners of Legal Light and other race horses. Mr. and Mrs. Playard, also from Baltimore, had just stepped off the train and into Ouida's drawing room. Mrs. Playard, as she was leaving, said to me, regretfully: "This is my first visit to California, and I'd like to spend the rest of my life right here in this room with all of you."

At the party were Marlene Dietrich, Doug. jr., Gladys and Frank Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Atwell, the John McCormicks (the popular Irish tenor loves music better than his life), Lester Donahue, who played "The White Peacock" and Bunny Charles, who played and sung his own composition. One about "Mad Manhattan" made me quite homesick for the old town. Just as Basil was reaching for a cup of tea he noticed the caviar and switched immediately to cocktails.

LITTLE — FIRST WASHINGTON SHOWING — GRAND PRIX WINNER — PETER THE FIRST

Nationals Start Training at Orlando Today

The Washington Post Sports

*X WASHINGTON: MONDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1938 15

This Morning..

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla.

The appearance of the fellow is almost articulate. That broad, snap-brim hat, that seam-lined face, those keen, deep-set eyes fairly shout that the man is from Texas. And that trace of a drawl is the clincher. Inasmuch as he's down here with the Washington ball club, he would be, of course, Clyde Milan.

POVICH.

He's the man with a mission in the Nats' training camp. As the No. 1 coach of the Washington club, he has one job that transcends all others. He's supposed to make a big league outfielder out of George Washington Case, a 21-year-old rookie from Trenton who risks a scalp wound ever time he starts after a fly ball and a broken arm whenever he slides into a base.

They'll turn young Case over to Clyde Milan. And the suspicion is that he will be in the hands of the proper party. Because your dad will tell you that Clyde Milan was the finest outfielder ever to pull on a Washington uniform. And dad'll probably pull out the record books if you give him an argument.

* * * *

The various coaching duties of Mr. Milan shrink into unimportance compared to his assignment in the case of young Mr. Case. It seems that Clark Griffith wants a big league outfielder made of young Mr. Case. Griffith will vouch for the lad's ability to hit big league pitching and honestly thinks he's the fastest thing in baseball spikes. But his outfielding and his base running—ah, there's the rub.

It seems that young Case lacks that happy faculty of knowing where a fly ball is headed and his speed in the outfield is thus a doubtful asset. And it seems also that young Case's speed on the bases is equally of doubtful importance at this writing because he doesn't know how to slide. It seems that he has a tendency to fall on his arm when he hits the dirt and the question is not whether Mr. Case is safe or out, but whether or not he breaks an arm or a leg in the attempt.

Mr. Case Cost Griff Only $1,000.

With all due respect to Al Simmons, Mr. Griffith is hoping that G. W. Case, not Simmons, is Washington's third regular outfielder. Because in the event that Case makes the grade this season, Mr. Griffith will have something there. He will have the fleetest player in the league and can reasonably expect a decade of excellent service from him. And Case stands the Washington club only $1,000, the purchase price paid to the Trenton team.

As we were saying, it seems that when they are turning the destinies of young Case over to Clyde Milan, they are putting him in the hands of the proper party. If Milan can impart a tithe of his own skill to his young charge, Case will be all (say that slowly) right. Because the crack of the bat was always the signal for Milan to start galloping in the proper direction when he played the outfield for the Nats. One look usually sufficed Milan. After that, somebody was robbed of a hit.

Milan Starred in Days of Ty Cobb.

And if it's base running they want to teach Case, well, they might have hired Ty Cobb, but that seems hardly necessary with Milan on the pay roll. Because Milan set a record for stealing bases in the American League at a time when Cobb was in his heyday. In 1912, young Zeb Milan was the scourge of the American League base paths. He swiped 88 bases that season, and if you want to draw the picture finer, kindly recall that, in recent years, there hasn't been an entire ball club which has stolen 88 bases.

The first thing that Milan will teach young Case when he gets him in the sliding pit is to keep those arms outstretched and far behind when he hits the dirt. He'll make Case flatten out. He'll try to teach Case to give the infielder nothing more than the tip of a toe as a target. He'll tell him to start his slide quicker and quit hitting the dirt in a heap. He'll keep him everlastingly at it until sliding pads are worn thin or Case learns the trick.

Five grand is a pretty fair guess at Milan's salary and if he hammers the rough edges off Case and transforms him into a big leaguer, he'll have earned it with something to spare. That speed, if it can be utilized, will fit very nicely into the Nats' line-up. Manager Bucky Harris is prepared to let Case run—if he gets on base.

"If he's as fast as they tell me," Milan was saying, "it'll be a crime to let a fellow like him wait for a sign to steal. When Mr. Griffith was managing the club and I was a pretty fair base stealer, I didn't have to wait for any sign. It's tough to try to steal on a certain pitch. The base runner has to 'feel' that he has the break on a pitcher. The manager on the bench doesn't know. And the smart manager knows he doesn't know."

Griffith Regime Is Like a Dynasty.

Clyde Milan, who was one of the few big leaguers on the Washington teams during that lean decade from 1915 to 1924 when Washington teams were the doormats of the league, is one of the Washington baseball family. Somehow, Clark Griffith's regime smacks of a dynasty. Mike Martin, his trainer, has been with Griffith 35 years. Edward B. Eynon, the secretary-treasurer of the club, has been with Griffith 18 years; Billy Smith, assistant secretary, has been a member of the Griffith forces for nigh onto 20 years. Manager Bucky Harris first drew pay from Griffith 20 years ago. And Milan has been a Griffith employe off and on for 25 years.

That weather-beaten face of Milan's is the mark of a man who has played ball on 5,000 hot afternoons in the big leagues, under the Texas sun and in the Southern Association which can slap the years on a fellow's countenance faster than a whirring calendar. And those eyes of Milan's, deep-set under furrowed brows and peering out of a wind-tanned, wrinkled countenance, are eyes attuned to Texas' rolling plains. Texas, it seems, is a big State. Try driving from Virginia to El Paso, Tex., some day. When you reach the eastern border of Texas, you're still farther from El Paso than you are from Virginia.

Abrams Holds Edge Tonight Over Ciaccio

8-Rounder Tops Card at Arena; First Bout at 8:30 o'Clock.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

George Abrams resumes his quest for middleweight recognition tonight, engaging Tony Ciaccio at the Arena in an eight-round bout that has all the earmarks of an honest-to-goodness test.

Fresh from a five-round knockout over Eddie Guerra, Ciaccio will climb through the ropes on the long end of 6-5 odds, but with the blessing of the District Boxing Commission.

The Itinerant Italian reported three days in advance of the fight at the commission's insistence, and, after undergoing a thorough examination by Paul Haworth, of the that body, was officially approved. If he doesn't measure up to your expectations, blame it on the commission.

While it may be establishing a dangerous precedent by hand-picking opponents for Abrams, thereby usurping the duties and rights of his manager, Syd Fishel, the governing body is determined to guarantee the fans honest matches. Whether it can guarantee action, excitement and a satisfying fight remains to be seen. It's a large order, even for the commission.

Seasoned Campaigner.

Ciaccio is a seasoned campaigner. He whipped Gene Buffalo only recently, and holds decisions over Howell King, Johnny McHale and Jose Santos. He drew with Jimmy Jones and lost a couple of close bouts to Paulie Walker and another to Andre Jessurun, all of which has been related before, but is repeated as evidence of his ability.

Abrams, it is safe to say, hasn't met a fighter of his mettle thus far, and, while the local candidate should win, he'll have to show something. Ciaccio is no Wojack. He catches fairly well, but, unlike George's last and unlamented opponent, punches back when stung. Ciaccio is no knockout artist, but a clever ring general able to capitalize on the opposition's mistakes.

This bout figures to give Abrams a good chance to show his true worth as a boxer. He has class, polish, and if Ciaccio happens to look bad tonight don't blame it all on him, for Abrams' cleverness may be partially to blame. The District boy doesn't figure to kayo his man, but if he gets the decision that will be very satisfactory.

Mamakos on Card.

The semi-final between Steve Mamakos and "Toots" Bernstein looks like a natural, with Mamakos a slight favorite to take the verdict. Bernstein won the nod over Bob Wilson here two weeks ago, but didn't show enough power to justify establishing him as a favorite over the Greek.

Mamakos goes like a wild man from the first bell to the last. He takes a punch and comes back with a half-dozen, and it's going to take a lot of power to put him on the carpet. Bernstein doesn't seem to have enough to do it.

Four-round preliminaries will see Rusy Burk, vs. War Chief Wilson; Doug Swetnam vs. Brooks Bowen, and Billy Temes vs. Johnny Earick. The latter is pinch-hitting for Mike O'Leary, who was injured. The first bout starts at 8:30 o'clock.

Maryland vs. Citadel In Cage Meet Opener

W. and L., Defending Champion, Draws North Carolina U. Five in First Round.

By the Associated Press.

Lynchburg, Va., Feb. 27.—North Carolina's White Phantoms, No. 1 seeded quint, will meet Washington and Lee's defending champions in the first round of the seventeenth annual Southern Conference basketball tournament at Raleigh, N. C., next Thursday night.

The conference basketball committee, meeting here today to select eight teams from the 15-member circuit to compete in the championship event, placed North Carolina State in the second seeded position, The Citadel third and Clemson fourth.

Other teams extended a bid to the tournament were Richmond, Duke and Maryland.

First bracket—Clemson vs. Richmond at 3 p. m., and North Carolina vs. Washington and Lee at 8 p. m.

Second bracket—The Citadel vs. Maryland at 4:30 p. m., and N. C. State vs. Duke at 9:30 p. m.

Draw Important.

The committee, headed by Eddie Cameron, of Duke, chairman, called a newspaperman into the executive session to make the drawings after the heat leader had been selected. The drawings were of prime significance this year, the committeemen agreed, due to the strength of the nonseeded entries.

When Washington and Lee was drawn from the hat as Carolina's opponent in the preliminary round, a colorful three-year championship series between the two squads was ended.

North Carolina won the title in 1935 and 1936 by defeating W. and L. in the finals, while the Generals triumphed over the Tarheels last year.

In pairing Carolina with W. and L., and Duke with N. C. State, the committeemen agreed that the two most dangerous nonseeded teams were drafted into elimination duels with the top-seeded contenders. Tournament officials predicted that this schedule would attract a record opening night crowd and provide a wide-open struggle for the crown.

V. P. I. Misses.

Virginia Tech, in ninth place, and Wake Forest in tenth position, missed tournament berths by narrow margins.

Paul Menton, of Baltimore; George Proctor, of Richmond, and Merrill Knight, of Durham, were selected to officiate in the tournament. Semifinals will be held Friday night and finals Saturday night.

Dr. R. R. Sermon, of N. C. State, vice chairman of the committee, reported that 1,800 additional seats would be placed in Raleigh's memorial auditorium due to the unusual interest in the event this season, bringing the seating capacity to nearly 5,000.

Clemson and The Citadel are the newcomers to the tournament field, replacing South Carolina and Wake Forest, contenders in 1937.

Only two more conference games remain to be played before the tournament and neither of these will affect the top-flight standings.

Wake Forest, conquerors of North Carolina in their first meeting, closes with a return game at Davidson Monday night, while Virginia Tech and V. M. I. bring the loop dual meet schedule to an end Tuesday with a postponed contest at Lexington.

The standings:

	W.	L.	Pts.	Points Agst.
North Carolina	13	2	570	460
N. Carolina State	10	3	510	452
Citadel	7	3	338	317
Clemson	9	4	536	458
Richmond	8	4	383	350
Duke	9	5	528	488
Maryland	6	4	361	349
Washington and Lee	7	5	460	391
Virginia Tech	4	5	367	389
Wake Forest	6	8	556	536
Davidson	5	10	509	513
Furman	2	7	267	383
V. M. I.	2	7	248	313
South Carolina	1	13	436	580

12 Rookies, 4 Regulars Are in Camp

Jimmy Wasdell, Heavier by 17 Pounds, Is Joy to Harris.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 27.—Washington ball players in assorted sizes and shapes detrained throughout the afternoon at the dumpy little whistle-stop Orlando calls it's station and tonight Manager Bucky Harris could count 16 noses.

An even dozen of 'em are rookies. There are big ones, little ones, fat ones, skinny ones. Half of those, without a chance to stick in the big leagues, just came for the ride. Harris, who had never met up with them before, was running a curious and appraising eye over the lot until the 11 o'clock curfew hour.

But there wasn't much doubt which rookie already has made the biggest—literally — impression on the Nats manager. He is first baseman Jimmy Wasdell who this season is a 197-pound package, 17 pounds heavier than last year.

Likes Wasdell.

Which is all right with Harris who likes Wasdell to start with and who will be even fonder of the lad if those extra pounds can be translated into more hitting power. The fact is that young Wasdell, who is serious about hunching Joe Kuhel out of the first base job, last year gave definite signs of being the best distance hitter on the club and at 197 pounds looms as even more of a threat.

The Nats manager was slightly bewildered when Owner Clark Griffith introduced him to a batch of rookies whose train had preceded Harris. For a time, Harris was thinking he had bumped into a prep school squad. Catcher Jake Livingston, from Chattanooga; Catcher Bill Beard, Willamette College star from the Coast, and Pitchers Joe Haynes, of Jacksonville and Early Wynn, from Sanford, are near-beardless bright-eyed youths who look like fugitives from the traunt officer.

Nine of the 16 athletes in camp are pitchers and that number will zoom to 12 tomorrow when Wes Ferrell, Pete Appleton and Elon Hogsett check in. Present tonight are the veterans Jimmy DeShong, and Monte Weaver and the rookies, Ken Chase, Ray Phebus, Joe Kohlman, Emil Leonard, Joe Krakauskas, Joe Haynes and Early Wynn.

Workout Tomorrow.

Tomorrow in the first workout of the campaign, Harris will be watchful for signs of encouraging "action" on the part of his young brigade. If he plucks one pitcher out of the second flight of rookies—Haynes, Kohlman and Wynn—he will be overjoyed, but he is not too optimistic.

On the inevitable other hand, if his No. 1 lot of pitching recruits does not produce a pair of confirmed big leaguers, Harris will be disappointed indeed. He has reason to believe that Ken Chase, Joe Kraskauskas, Ray Phebus and Emil Leonard are destined for a big league future.

Harris is staunch in his belief that the fast-balling southpaw, Chase, has already "arrived." His sensational pitching at the tag end of last season left a profound impression on Harris and en route to Orlando today the Nats' manager was further impressed by the southpaw's chances. Coaches John Schulte and Art Fletcher, of the Yankees, who were trainmates of Harris as far as Jacksonville, had the highest praise for Chase who beat the Yankees twice last season.

Stars Missing as Yanks Start Spring Drills

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP).—The advance guard of the New York Yankees, including Manager Joe McCarthy and several players, reached here today to begin their spring training tomorrow. However, as in years past, it looked as though they would have to start without several of their stars.

The most prominent absentees from the first squad of pitchers and catchers were Lefty Gomez and Charley Ruffing, respective left and righthanded aces of the pitching staff. Neither is signed and neither was in sight tonight.

Lou Gehrig, Joe DiMaggio, other aristocratic holdouts, were not here either, but they are not due to report until next week. There are seven unsigned Yankees, the others being Spurgeon Chandler, Frank Crosetti and Red Rolfe.

McCarthy said the Yankees would follow their regular custom of holding one workout a day, starting about 11 a. m. and continuing until the players grow tired, usually about 2 p. m.

Athletics Hold Only One Workout

Lake Charles, La., Feb. 27 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics had only one workout today and rested while awaiting arrival of the remainder of the squad. All of the infielders and outfielders with the exception of Wally Moses, who is still unsigned, are expected to join the pitchers and catchers tomorrow.

Manager Connie Mack announced he would divide the squad into two groups, one training in the morning and the other in the afternoon, for the next three days in order to give more attention to individual players. He also carded a camp game for next Thursday in preparation for games with the New York Giants next Saturday and Sunday.

Camilli Is Absent From Phils' Drill

Biloxi, Miss., Feb. 27 (AP).—Dolph Camilli, slugging first baseman of the Philadelphia Nationals, was missing today as the Phillies held their first spring training workout, and Manager Jimmy Wilson said he was a holdout.

Wilson did not disclose the salary Camilli asked, but said it was "so ridiculous that it proves to me only that he wants to duck the training camp."

Loyola Five To Test G.W. In 2 Games

Offensive Battles Loom in Series Starting Tomorrow.

Envisioning a national championship for his George Washington University basketball team, Coach Bill Reinhart prepared to send his team into the two-day series with Loyola University of Chicago, tomorrow and Wednesday, with instruction to "shoot to kill."

Experience of a previous defeat suffered at the hands of "Snow Mike" Novak and his dwarfs, the Colonial mentor has decided to do away with defensive planning and will send his boys onto the Tech High gym floor hoping to outscore the Ramblers in a shooting match.

Extensive practice with a fast breaking attack last week has left Reinhart in a pleasant frame of mind and the thoughts of an invitation to the First Annual National Tournament in New York next month kept him busy over the week-end trying to dope out ways of overcoming the advantage the visitor will have in 6-foot 9-inch Novak.

It was Novak who scored 19 points and paved the way to defeat for Colonials in the three over-time period battle in Chicago last month. But Reinhart has decided that it is futile to try and check his shooting. Instead, he will send the local club out to beat Novak and his scoring partner, Dave Gautz, great shooter, to the punch.

After the Loyola series, the Colonials have two games remaining on the card. Davis Elkins will be met at Cumberland Friday and then the season will be closed Saturday against Washington-Jefferson, at Washington, Pa. A clean sweep will result in a bid to the New York tournament and a chance to win recognition in a tournament with other top-notch teams of the country.

To date, the Colonials have lost but three games in 14, having dropped decisions to Toledo, Long Island, besides Loyola.

They have defeated Ohio State, Minnesota, Tennessee and Wayne twice; Westminster, St. John's, of New York, and West Virginia among others.

Loyola started off with a bang, winning 11 out of 14 also. But the present road trip has proven costly. Straight losses to Nebraska and Gavier, in Cincinnati, have harmed its record and the double-header with George Washington is being viewed as a means of returning to a winning streak.

Fernwood Wins.

Playing a fast brand of hockey, Fernwood S. C., of Baltimore, which recently reached the semi-finals of the H. Rowland competition, defeated the German Sports team, 3 to 1, on the Polo Field.

D. C. Scoring Honors Won By Ambrose

By Bob Garrison.

Wayne Ambrose, Catholic University forward, the one bright spot in the dismal Cardinal basketball season, is the District scoring champion, according to figures compiled last night.

With all but George Washington having closed the regular 1937-1938 season, local schools for the second straight year have found the pace setter in a Catholic University uniform, as Ambrose succeeds Herman Schmarr, last year's champion.

His total of 212 points, registered in 18 games for an average of better than 11 points per contest, gave him a commanding lead over his three closest rivals, George (Dutch) Knepley, Charles (Chuck) Norton, and Waverly Wheeler, all of Maryland.

Ambrose, who played with the weak C. U. team, which won but 4 games in 18 games, proved to be an accurate set-shot artist, scoring 158 points from the floor and only 14 from the foul line.

Jack Butterworth, George Washington University center, was holder of fifth position, but has a chance to overtake several players above him in the four remaining games on the Colonials' card this week.

Norton, Terp center, scored 148 points in 12 games, before becoming scholastically ineligible, to average better than 12 points per game to lead in that respect. Knepley, guard and captain of the Maryland five, scored 152 points in 21 games to place second to Ambrose.

The highest number of points scored in a single game was registered by Hugo Schulze, freshman guard at American University, who rang up 29 against Virginia Medical College. Norton scored 25 against V. P. I. and Ambrose chalked up 2 less against Western Maryland.

Georgetown's leading scorer was Capt. Mike Petrosky, who posted 130 points in 17 games as a result of his long-range shooting and exceptional follow-up play. Schulze, with 98 points in 11 games, paced the A. U. team.

St. John's '5' Plays Host To LaSalle

Crack Philadelphians Invade Tonight for Contest.

By Jack Munhall.

St. John's chance of entering the National Catholic Basketball Tournament, as well as its chance for success if it gets there, will be definitely decided tonight as the city champions clash with La Salle High School, of Philadelphia, in the season's outstanding scholastic attraction.

This fuss, scheduled for C. U. gym at 8 o'clock, was arranged for the specific purpose of financing St. John's trip to Chicago and the National event but now takes on several other important aspects.

The Cadet five in facing La Salle, which for two of the last three campaigns was Philadelphia's best, will be facing a team that has competed successfully in the Chicago play for two years and one which will provide the same degree of opposition that is expected at Chicago.

Too, the inevitable cries that Washington's basketball power is on the decline will be abruptly hushed or permitted to break out with renewed vigor as a result of the decision.

The Johnnies, although upset by Bethesda-Chevy Chase in their most recent effort, certainly quality as one of the best two teams in this city. Therefore, contrasted with La Salle, which this year is considered equally as good as West Catholic High, the Quaker City titlist, St. John's upholds the honor of Washington high schools against one of the strongest invaders ever to appear here.

Coached by Charley O'Brien, recognized as the best schoolboy pilot in the vicinity of the Quaker City, La Salle has compiled an amazing three-year record against a better-than-average type of opposition. Over this span the visitors have annexed 59 of 68 encounters while receiving invitations to the national tournament for three consecutive years.

As previously stated, they were adjudged Philadelphia's most powerful team in 1935-36 and 1936-37 and this season hold a decision over West Catholic, to which they finished second in the city league.

According to releases, La Salle will present one of the most colorful and fastest offenses ever seen locally. The team which was awarded a trophy at Chicago in 1936 for being the best-coached outfit in the tournament employs many set plays, unusual in scholastic competition. One play, in particular,

Brattlund Takes Senior Ski Title

Ironwood, Mich., Feb. 27 (AP).—Walter Brattlund, of Iron Mountain, Mich., won the national senior class ski championship today with leaps of 125 and 147 feet for 139.6 points in the feature event of the Gogebic Range Ski Club's tournament on its new slide.

Paul Bietila, of the five skiing brothers of Ishpeming, Mich., took Class A honors, and his brother, Roy, won Class C. Elmer Saari, Ishpeming, won Class B.

Wilson High Rifle Club Gets Charter

The Woodrow Wilson High School Rifle Club, of this city, has been granted a charter by the National Rifle Association, the national governing body of the sport of rifle shooting, according to an announcement made today at the headquarters of the association here. The club has a charter membership of 78.

Engel's Player Must Be Adept At Jig-Sawing

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 27.—Joe Engel, fun loving president of the Chattanooga Club, who once traded a shortstop for a turkey, who hung caged canaries in his grandstands, who once road an elephant into his park during the opening day ceremonies, is in the news again.

It seems that the 1938 contract sent by Engel to Outfielder Stratton of the Chattanooga Club, displeased Stratton. The outfielder tore the contract into a hundred pieces. Enclosed the bits in a letter and returned it to Engel, demanding better terms.

But his little idea boomeranged on Stratton. Engel opened the letter, grimly noted the contents, carefully transferred the bits of paper to another envelope and wrote Stratton:

"When you put this puzzle together again and sign it, you can report to Chattanooga Club. If you're no good at working jig-saws, my friend, you're out of organized baseball."

Sol Schiff Wins Table Tennis Title Over Jacobsen in Finals

By Perry Wilkinson.

Sol Schiff, of New York, top-ranking United States table tennis player, won the Eastern States championship title last night by defeating Jimmy Jacobson, New Rochelle, ranked No. 19 nationally, 22-20, 21-17, 22-20, before 1,000 spectators at the Heurich Gymnasium.

Schiff, who was given the bronx cheer loudly and lustily for failure to comply with the "chiseling" rule in his semifinal bout with Izzy Bellis, of Philadelphia, had a comparatively easy time with Jacobson. Jacobson served a high bouncing ball that gave Schiff plenty of opportunity of smeshing across the net.

Bellis, Pennsylvania State champion and a strictly defensive player, had a tailspin on his return that left the ball low to the table. In fact, so low, that the New Yorker was unable to return them speedily. Hence, the reason why the "pushing" game resulted—a game that met the disapproval of the crowd. Every time that Schiff put in his appearance afterwards, he received a great ovation of the wrong sort.

W. Cameron Burton, master of ceremonies and president of the District Table Tennis Association, and George H. Foster, general chairman, were of the opinion that Schiff was right in his behavior, because the rule applied to "pushing" was a local rule and Schiff had never played under it before. But President Carl Zeisberg, of the U. S. T. T. A., who awarded the prizes to all winners, stated that he thought Schiff had violated the rule on three different occasions.

Emily Fuller, of New York, No. 2 ranking table tennis ace, won the women's title by trouncing Mae Clouther, No. 9 national ranking, in three straight sets, 21—16, 21—11, 21—13.

In the men's doubles event, Jimmy Jacobson and Leslie Lowry, Massachusetts State champion, defeated the strong combination of Sol Schiff and Lloyd Waterson, but it took the full five games to bring home the trophy. The scores were 21—11, 21—18, 20—22, 16—21, 21—19.

The mixed doubles competition saw Emily Fuller and Sol Schiff blaze an easy path to the crown by walloping Leslie Lowry and Mae Clouther in just three games. The two New Yorkers were a cinch to win even before the first volley was under way. The scores of 21—13, 21—15, 21—19, showed why the Fuller-Schiff combination is considered among the best in the country.

Besides the Schiff-Bellis disputed affair one other semifinal bout rounded out the evening program. That was between Jacobson and Elias Shuman, District champion. Shuman in two of the games kept the national ranking star in hot water, but it was evident that the pace set was too strong for the Washington boy. The win of 21—18, 21—10, 21—17, sent Jacobson into the finals with Schiff, where he was defeated.

Kansas Miler Faces a Test At Baltimore

Glenn Cunningham, Kansas miler, who has been burning up the boards of Eastern indoor tracks this season, will find the competition stiff Saturday when he attempts to add the Governor's Mile Trophy to his collection.

Feature of the University of Maryland-Fifth Regiment Armory games, listed for Saturday in Baltimore, the Governor's classic will be entered by Gene Venzke, and Archie San Romani, the Kansas ace, who is the latest entry to date.

San Romani became the last of the Big Three to announce his intention when he notified Chairman Geary Eppley Saturday that he would be on hand to compete for the trophy offered by Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland.

The trophy, a sterling silver bowl, must be won two out of three times by the same athlete, or failing that, it goes to the contestant who has established the fastest time in the three years of competition.

Last year's winner was Joseph McClusky, New York Athletic Club, with the time of 4:19.8. McClusky has not entered this year's race. Mason Chronister, of Maryland, has been invited to run against the "Big Three."

Georgetown and Catholic University will enter large squads as will V. M. I., Washington and Lee, Virginia, and Richmond.

In the Prep and High Schools division, Roosevelt, Wilson, Central, Tech, Hyattsville, Washington and Lee, and Episcopal will be represented in large numbers.

Frankie Frisch Hurt.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 27 (U.P.).—X-rays tonight revealed Frankie Frisch, St. Louis Cardinal manager, had suffered fractures of two small bones in his right ankle that will keep him in a cast for the next two weeks. Frisch said he hurt his ankle practicing "starts" at the Cards' Winter Haven, Fla., baseball school last week.

Dave Sklaar Wins Skeet Shooting

Florham Park, N. J., Feb. 27 (AP).—Shooting in almost total darkness, Dave Sklaar, of Brooklyn, N. Y., tonight won the individual Middle Atlantic all-gauge skeet shooting championship in a third shoot-off.

The Roseland (N. J.) Skeet Club won the all-gauge five-man team shoot with a score of 491 out of a possible 500, which was two birds under the world's record established by the California Skeet Club in 1936.

For the high over all record, for the most birds in the two-day shoot, George C. Deyoe, of Washington, D. C., and E. E. Garland, of Belleville, N. J., were tied at 285 and Deyoe won, 24 to 23, in a shoot-off.

At the end of the regular four rounds in the individual high gun competition there was a six-place tie at 99 out of a possible 100 for first place among C. H. Wisner, Westport, Conn.; R. Lamborn, Montclair, N. J.; V. A. Frank, jr., Washington, D. C.; Dr. C. W. Scranton, East Orange, N. J.; E. E. Garland, Belleville, N. J.; and Sklaar.

Londos May Meet Local Mat Victor

The winner of the Jesse James-Dr. John "Dropkick" Murphy wrestling bout on Thursday may get a crack at Jim Londos on a card here.

Londos decisioned Murphy last month in a popular match, and is due for another local appearance shortly.

Weaver Signs Contract

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 27.—Monte Weaver, who pitched himself into a $1,500 salary raise, signed his 1938 contract with the Nats today. President Clark Griffith had originally offered Weaver a $1,000 increase, but for the first time in his career Weaver was a holdout. Albeit a mild one.

Weaver, who was not regarded as one of the top-flight Washington pitchers last season, actually had the best percentage of any on the Nats' staff with 12 wins and 9 defeats.

Perry Beats Vines In Miami Match

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP).—Fred Perry defeated Ellsworth Vines, 4—6, 7—5, 6—3, today to pull within two matches of the Californian in their current professional tennis series. Vines has won 14 matches and Perry 12.

They played a backcourt game, with Vines frequently netting his returns. The Englishman made a number of difficult recoveries, but came up to the net only occasionally.

Sandlot Star Signs.

Atlanta, Feb. 27 (AP).—Charlie Hooten, who as a sandlot player pitched three no-hit ball games several years ago, said yesterday he had signed a contract to pitch for the Spartanburg club of the South Atlantic League. He won six and lost one for Griffin in the last five weeks of the season last year.

Byron Nelson Wins Thomasville Open; Emery Takes Houston Event

Don't Sell Seabiscuit Short! May Surprise Us Saturday

By Walter Haight

"Little horse," as John A. Manfuso, Georgetown University graduate and Washington chemical manufacturer, fondly refers to his thoroughbread, Aneroid, may be the second son of The Porter to carry off chief honors in the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap come Saturday. Last year Rosemont came from eleventh place to stick his nose in front of Seabiscuit at the wire. This year Aneroid will represent 1937's leading money-winning sire in the rich classic. Both were bred in Virginia at Llangollen, the country place of the John Hay Whitneys.

From the West Coast last Saturday came a series of wire flashes—"Off at Santa Anita"—"Photo finish at Santa Anita"—"Winner Santa Anita, Aneroid." Making his final test before next Saturday's rich battle, Aneroid had hung a nose defeat on C. S. Howard's Seabiscuit, champion money-getter of thoroughbred ranks last year.

At the bell, Aneroid had jumped to the front and under Jockey Charlie Rosengarten's handling he had led the great field from start to finish. True, the margin was a matter of inches, but the race stamps the Washington-owned horse as a major threat in the dash for the 100-grand.

Bookmakers Are Chased.

I don't know that there is a word of truth in it, but I'm told bridges into Virginia and roads into Maryland were jammed last Saturday night with District bookmakers, risking permanent disgrace in gambling circles by fleeing the army that backed Aneroid at a $17.80 mutuel. I understand that the bookies disappeared into the night muttering, "Aneroid, Aneroid—"

Now I'm not going overboard on Aneroid—although I may stick my big toe in.

His triumph over Seabiscuit was by the scantiest of margins and came at a mile and an eighth—an eighth shorter than the route of the Santa Anita Handicap. That Seabiscuit was making his first start of the year must be taken into consideration. Doubtless he needed the race. Then again, Seabiscuit was closing ground on Aneroid through the stretch. An Associated Press wirephoto, taken at a point near the final bend, shows Jockey Workman standing in the stirrups and holding tightly on the reins.

The chart of the race says: "Seabiscuit probably would have won on a longer route." In addition, some reports from the West Coast indicated that the son of Hard Tack was not "all out" at the finish. However, the picture seems to tell me that he was driving.

A study of the finish photos leave me of the openion that Aneroid might have had a little in reserve. If the chart caller's margin of a nose is accurate, Aneroid might have turned on just a flash of added speed crossing the line. One picture, the angle notwithstanding, reveals the Washington horse at least a neck ahead of his rival after they were some 4 feet the other side of the line.

Seabiscuit was reported to have been in "rather tight quarters" in the early stages. As he is not a front-runner, this fact probably had no bearing on the result.

Both Should Improve.

That Seabiscuit probably will improve off the race is likely, but Aneroid also should be better for having a long race under his saddle strap. Aneroid was fourth in two 6-furlong races at Santa Anita and ran a long route for the first time since last November. Evidently he had his speed, for he ran Woodberry, an outstanding sprinter, into defeat before going on to take down the purse.

Aneroid's time of 1:50, while not sensational, was creditable. Seabiscuit holds the track record of 1:48 4-5 for the mile and an eighth. Chart notes did not reveal that Aneroid pulled up favoring the "tight" front foot that put him on the shelf after he lost by a nose to Seabiscuit in the Brooklyn Handicap last summer and kept him from being himself in his fall races in Maryland.

The mile and a quarter distance of the Santa Anita Handicap is not new to Aneroid. The Brooklyn was at that route as well as the Suburban, a race that Anercid won in the amazing time of 2:01 3-5.

Other Horses to Run.

But, lest we forget, other horses, and not a slouch among them, will face the barrier along with Seabiscuit and Aneroid. In this group will be Pompoon, which spent last spring chasing War Admiral; Sceneshifter, a smashing winner of a trial at the California track and in sensational form now; Indian Broom, third in the 1937 Kentucky Derby and in the same position behind Aneroid and Seabiscuit last Saturday, and Time Supply, coming to condition gradually and, despite his age—a menace.

But win, lose or dead heat, Manfuso will show a profit on his invasion of California. Roughly, the cost of shipping his three horses to the Coast, their maintenance, plus all other expenses, will be in the neighborhood of $6,000, as compared to the $7,100 check taken by the Washington owner as the result of Aneroid's victory on the San Antonio Handicap.

Aneroid Saves the Day.

When Manfuso shipped Aneroid West he took True Tune, his mare, and Time Saver, a colt he leased, as companions for the son of The Porter. He had hoped that True Tune and Time Saver would earn their way, if not pay all expenses in the event that Aneroid failed. Time Saver, beaten off twice, became ill and had to be shelved and True Tune wrenched an ankle and was forced out of training.

This is my parting shot on Aneroid before leaving today on a Transcontinental and Western air liner for the California scene of next Saturday's race but I can't take off without passing this one along:

Andy, the veteran newspaper salesman, was looking at the result of the Aneriod-Seabiscuit race. He remarked, "Ain't it funny how a horse named 'Adenoid' is always getting mixed up in them NOSE finishes?"

Scores 280; Metz Second, Cooper Next

Nelson Wins $700 Top Money; Metz Four Strokes Back.

By Kenneth Gregory,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Thomasville, Ga., Feb. 27.—Leading from start to finish, young Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa., a member of the United States Ryder Cup team, won the Thomasville Open Golf Tournament today with a score of 280, 8 strikes under Glen Arven's par.

The 26-year-old native Texan, after collecting only $520 for his previous efforts on the winter circuit, got on his game here to walk away with the top prize of $700. His sensational first-round 66 set the stage for the victory.

Another young professional, Dick Metz, of Chicago, who won here a year ago, finished in second place, 4 strokes back of the triumphant Nelson and 1 blow ahead of Lighthorse Harry Cooper, of Chicopee, Mass.

Nelson put the finishing touch on his victory with two sub-par rounds of 71-70 today. On the winter swing, his best previous effort was third place in the Pasadena Open with a 279 and his average score for 28 rounds was 73.65, many points over his adversaries.

Metz Collects $450.

Metz, winner in 1937 by defeating Ed Dudley, of Augusta, in a playoff after they finished the 72-hole stretch with 284's, collected $450 for his runner-up performance. Cooper, golf's leading money winner and low-average scorer of the winter campaign, received $350.

In achieving his victory, Nelson, winner of last year's Augusta National Tournament over Ralph Guldahl, National Open champion, went over regulation 72 figures only once and that was in the second round when he took 73 strokes.

Metz was never over par. He had an opening round 70, followed by two 71's and matched standard figures on the stretch journey. Cooper, after a first-round 74, settled down to a 69-70-72 exhibition.

Frank Moore Fourth.

Frank Moore, of Mamoroneck, N. Y., a brother of Terry Moore, of the St. Louis Cardinals, finished fourth and drew down $250 for his 289 total, which was just a stroke over regulation figures for the route. Nelson, Metz, and Cooper were the only ones to shatter par.

Finishing with a 2-under-par 70 on the last 18 holes, Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., came in fifth with 290, and Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., was next with 291, having two Sunday rounds of 72 each.

After three fine rounds and a 54-hole total of 215, which left him in fourth place, Felix Serafin, of Scranton, Pa., took 77 blows on the stretch and finished with 292 for seventh money. Just a stroke back of Serafin came Ben Hogan, of Fort Worth, Tex., and Johnny Revolta, Evanston, Ill., a former P. G. A. champion.

Sarazen Honored.

Gene Sarazen, the farmer-golfer from Brookfield Center, Conn., who was presented with a big cake for his thirty-sixth birthday today, landed in a tie seventeenth place, deadlocked with Frank Walsh of Chicago with 299. Gene had two 76's today, following his fine 70 of yesterday. He was playing in his first tournament since last August.

Bracketed at 285, two strokes back of Hogan and Revolta, were three players—Vic Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., Ed Oliver, of Wilmington, Del., and Tony Pena, of Dayton, Ohio. Leonard Doson, of Springfield, Mo., came next with 296, followed at 297 by Ky Laffoon of Chicago.

Cooper moved farther out in front as leading money winner for the winter campaign with a total of $3,023.33. Revolta was in second place with $2,610, followed by Thomson, who has collected $2,555. Nelson advanced to eighth place with $1,220.

The professional group arranged to leave here tonight and tomorrow for their next 72-hole scramble at St. Petersburg, Fla., March 2, 3 and 4.

Snellenburg Beats Local Pros, 47-44

Snellenburg Bros., of Philadelphia, handed Heurich its fourth home basketball defeat yesterday, winning a torrid game before 500 spectators in Heurich gym, 47-44.

The visitors, who recently won the Industrial League championship in the Quaker City, started slowly, but finished with a sensational brand of long shooting that Heuich was unable to match. A flurry of baskets in the final two minutes by Matt Myers and Bud Clancy broke a 40-40 deadlock and returned Snellenburg a deserving victor.

Heurich, although it shot with more than normal accuracy, seemed ragged, especially in passing, and did not appear as good as in its last few games. However, its inefficiency was probably due more or less to the skill of the invaders, who presented one of the strongest teams seen here this season.

In Myers and Tom McGraph they had two of the classiest ball-handlers and marksmen ever seen locally. Myers, in particular, was a very clever passer, amazing the fans time after time with his uncanny blind tosses.

He also shoved in 14 points to lead the winning attack. Otts Zahn, Heurich's stellar guard, was best for the losers.

In preliminaries Regal Clothiers won the deciding game of a three-game playoff for the Heurich Cup League championship, defeating F. B. I., 29-25, and Kensington beat Senate Beer, 42-39, in an upset.

District Girl Is Second In Skating

Dorothy Snell Runner-up in Women's Junior Championship.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Feb. 27.—An 18-year-old boy and a 16-year-old girl ruled the United States amateur figure skating world today as senior men's and women's champions.

Robin E. Lee, Olympic team skater from Minneapolis, won his third straight men's senior championship, and Joan Tozzer, of Boston, scored her first big victory in the United States Amateur Figure Skating Association's two-day championships, concluded at suburban Ardmore last night.

Lee outskated a field of four to retain his title. Earle Reiter, of St. Paul, finished second, and Ollie Haupt, jr., of St. Louis, third.

Miss Tozzer, successor to Mirabel Y. Vinson, who turned professional, outscored her rivals in both the school figures competition Friday and last night's free skating. Audrey Peppe, of New York; Polly Blodgett, of Boston; Jane Vaughn, of Philadelphia, and Katherine Durbrow, of New York, were ranked in that order behind her.

Youth Dominates Classes.

Youthful skaters also dominated the eight other championship events. Gretchen Merrill, 12-year-old Boston girl, was crowned new national women's novice champion; Eugene Turner, 17, Los Angeles High School boy, won the men's junior title, and 14-year-old Arthur (Buddy) Vaughn, of Philadelphia, captured the men's novice honors.

Charlotte Walther, of New York, won the women's junior title; Miss Tozzer and N. Bernard Fox, of Harvard, the senior pairs competition; Nettie C. Prantell and Harold Hartshorne, both of New York, the dance event.

D. C. Girl Second.

Dorothy Snell, of Washington, D. C., finished second in the women's junior event. Mary C. Taylor, of Los Angeles, was third. Floyd (Skippy) Baxter, of Oakland, Calif., ranked second in the men's novice class, followed by Bobby Specht, of Superior, Wis.

Runners-up for the senior pairs championship were Grace E. Madden and James L. Madden, both of Boston, while Ardelle Kloss Sanderson and Roland Janson, New York, were third. Katherine Durbrow and Joseph K. Savage, New York, were second in the dance competition, followed by Louise Atwell and Otto Dallmay, New York, third.

Places in National Skating Tourney

calls for the five boys to line up in single file on an out-of-bounds formation from which there is a double pick-off. This seldom fails to produce at least one basket per game.

McGlone a Wizard.

The star of La Salle, Johnny McGlone, a tall forward, is described by his coach as the greatest player he ever has handled. McGlone to date has totaled 179 points in 19 games and is also said to be an exceptionally clever ball-handler and defensive player.

Confronted with a team of La Salle's proved strength, St. John's will depend on the same five boys who have carried its colors through 20 contests with only two defeats. Coach Gene Augustefer, worried not the least by glowing tales of McGlone's phenomenal ability, is confident that Joe Gallagher his great little guard, will schackle the invader. Otherwise St. John's starting line-up will include Johnny Swagart and Jim Mulvihill, at forwards; Jim Giebel, at center and Francis Battiste at the other guard position.

La Salle's team will be composed of McGlone and Lawrence O'Donnell, at forwards; Joseph Swoyer, a 6-foot, 3-inch lad, at center and Stan Jarecki and George Thompson at guards.

Wins 5 and 4 With 3 Over Par Rounds

Edwin McClure, Defending Champion, No Match for Winner.

By the Associated Press.

Houston, Tex., Feb. 27.—Nerveless Walter Emery, cigar-puffing insurance salesman, pounded out invincible golf today to unseat Edwin McClure, 5 and 4, as defending Invitation Club.
Club.

The 26-year-old former Walker Cup star and 1935 National Amateur finalist finished the grind under a broiling sun at 74, 3 over par. McClure, trouble artist who leans heavily on a usually brilliant short game, spent the day in the rough and finished 9 over.

One up at the end of the first 18 holes, Emery started building his lead on the twentieth hole when McClure 3-putted. He turned the 27-hole post 5 up, dropped the thirtieth, then ran out the match by halving McClure's pars at the thirty-first and thirty-second holes.

Emery's road to the throne room was rough, his trouble starting as early as the qualifying round when he barely squeezed into match play after a four-hole playoff between 12 players scrapping for two open places in the championship draw.

Tossed in against Reynolds Smith, Dallas Walker Cup star in the first round, he beat Smith's brilliant 69. Next he went to the nineteenth green before he beat Jack Munger, of Dallas, former Southern champion, and then had to go to the same hole to dispose of Willie Maguire, jr., of Houston. It took his best to beat out Harry Todd, of Dallas in the semi-finals, but today he was master of McClure all the way.

McClure, many times winner of the Louisiana title and champion of his State at 14, defeated Jack Chambers, of Houston; Gus Novotny, of Chicago; John Dawson, of Chicago, and Ed White, of Houston, tournament medalist, to reach the finals.

Allan and Whitehead Win Four-Ball Title

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP).—Charley Whitehead, of South River, N. J., and Frank Allan, of Pittston, Pa., today came from behind and won the Miami-Biltmore amateur four-ball golf championship.

One down to S. C. Anderson, Coral Gables, and T. E. Price, Miami, at the end of 18 holes, Whitehead and Allan squared the match on the twenty-ninth. They won the thirtieth, thirty-third and closed Anderson and Price out at the thirty-fourth, 3 and 2.

Allan clinched the victory on the thirty-fourth when he chipped in from 50 feet for a birdie 3. Anderson putted from 30 for a possible halve on this green, but his ball hit the back of the cup and bounced out.

Training Camps

Claude Passeau also failed to report today. Scharein has signed a contract, however, while Whitney and Passeau have notified the club they would bring their contracts to camp.

Bee Batterymen Hold Long Drill

Bradenton, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP).—Lou Fette and Jim Turner, the Boston Bees' sensational 20-game pitchers, were the only drones today when Manager Casey Stengel put his swarm of batterymen through a 90-minute conditioning drill. Both of the pitching stars are physically far ahead of their teammates and Stengel excused them from the light session.

Stengel has decided to retain Pitcher Bobby Reis, who can play about every position, for general utility work and give Gil English, erstwhile third baseman, a trial in left field, a position he played for Toledo.

Indians Start Spring Practice

W. W. Chambers Wins.

The W. W. Chambers basketball team defeated the Little Tavern five, 44-21, at the Hyattsville Armory last night. Jackson and O'Connor each scored 10 points.

The Punch Line . . .

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Presiding over a cup of piping hot coffee, Senor Gabe Menendez is an affable companion. At times, especially when a critical finger is levelled at his table, the senor can be very belligerent. He takes his fighters almost as seriously as his coffee, even though they are taken frequently.

We found him one rainy afternoon sipping coffee behind a large plate-glass window. It was a gloomy day and the sight of damp, weary pedestrians plodding by seemed to make the senor's coffee more enjoyable. He not only was willing to talk, but eager, and we finally got around to the subject of Ben Finkel's "evil eye."

"I'll tell you how he got that name," volunteered the senor in his crisp syllables, "if you really want to know." We were all ears, figuratively speaking. Menendez and Finkel are pugilistic partners, after a fashion, and have been working together ever since the Southeastern Basebal League went broke.

• • • •

"Jim Downing promoted a charity boxing show at Tampa, Fla. (the senor's home town), and the Tampa Tribune got behind it. "Red" Newton, of the Tribune, handled the publicity, and since the featured fighters, Baby Miller and Chino Alvarez, weren't particularly strong box-office attractions, Newton hit on the idea of publicizing an "evil eye." Finkel was selected as the subject and the presses started to roll.

"Superstitious Spaniards, Italians and Latins in the territory went for the idea in a large manner. Mothers quieted feazy children with a threat of having the eye look at them. Photos of the eye were spread across the sports pages. Finkel was arrested and lodged in the gaol. The idea went over big, and when the fight came off Finkel actually put the eye on Alvarez, the favorite, and the latter lost by a wide margin. The eye never has failed since."

"What about the night your boy, Tommy Hoover, lost to Sammy Bacala, with both you and the "Eye" in the corner," we inquired naively?

"Well, if you noticed, Ben kept looking at me, not at Bacala throughout the fight and we didn't have the benefit of the magic glimmer."

Finkel was in Freddie Steele's corner that night in Rochester when the middleweight champion kayoed Bob Turner, and, it is reliably reported, is sorry he turned the optic on Turner so early in the fight.

"It spoiled the show," he sadly remarked.

Win, lose, or draw, George Abrams can't do himself any good tonight at the Arena in his bout with Tony Ciaccio. If the Italian should stretch the Jewish middleweight, the customers' thirst for his blood will be slaked. If this happens, Mr. Roosevelt is certain to vote the straight Republican ticket in '40.

If George loses, the wolves knew all along he was a flash in the pan, and his defeat proves it. If he wins Ciaccio must be another setup. How could he be anything else if Abrams whips him? It's purely a psychological attitude, but a barrier the lad can't hurdle by confining his activities to the home ring.

We don't know anything about Ciaccio, but since the commission passed him he must be all right. Abrams, however, can't do himself any good against him tonight. He's got to get away and prove himself in foreign battlepits.

• • • •

Lou Gevinson's case has no parallel with Abrams' for even though he, too, should fight out of town, he can't very well do it. He happens to be a southpaw and the better ringmen want nothing to do with portside punchers. Gevinson is going to win a lot of fights, and earn a tidy sum with those fists, but he's as far now as he'll ever be in the fight game. He doesn't have the connections for big-time fights—unless promoted locally, and, as noted above, the better boys aren't going in for southpaws these days.

Bob Tow is back in training at Alexandria, and also piloting his bus over the old, familiar route, but will not box for at least three weeks because of an injured hand. Tow was booked to box Hans Haverlick on the Max Baer-Tommy Farr card in New York, but Trainer Harry Raskin telephoned Manager Joe Gould yesterday, advising him to cancel the bout.

"I want Bob to be right in his next fight," Raskin said. "We don't want to have any excuses, and he won't have any if that mitt is okay."

Boxing Tournament 'Gate' Off From 1937

Geary Eppley, chairman of the Southern Conference boxing tourney, yesterday told the Associated Press the 1938 tournament won by Clemson College here last night was not as successful financially as last year's here.

Eppley, director of athletics at the University of Maryland, said Maryland would not object to moving the tournament to Charleston or Columbia, S. C.

Eppley said Southern coaches told him the interest in boxing would insure the success of a tournament held in South Carolina.

Fitzpatrick Raps Villanova Decision

Dean John B. Fitzpatrick, of Columbus University, yesterday scored the conditions under which the Columbus team lost to Villanova by a 6-to-2 score on Saturday night.

Dean Fitzpatrick thought his team should have received at least a 4-4 draw, and rightfully been a 5-to-3 winner, questioning the decisions against Ray Morse, Dave Schlaifer, Louis Hayman, Jim Brown and Bill Crum.

Navy Squads In Workouts

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 27.—Spring football practice begins at the Naval Academy tomorrow, while Coach Dinty Moore will assemble his lacrosse squad for the first time this season and Max Bishop will call out his diamond candidates one day during the week if weather permits.

As track men have been making occasional excursions into the open for some time and the crews have had many afternoons on the water, the week marks the opening of the practice season for spring sports in general.

Winter sports are gradually waning, though the schedule of boxing and basketball and most of the pleoe sports have been completed.

The swimmers will take their only trip of the season, meeting Harvard at Cambridge on Friday and Yale at New Haven on Saturday. The fencers will engage in a pentagonal match at Princeton on Saturday, meeting the Army, Yale, Harvard and Princeton.

The Navy fencers have won five straight matches and have not been defeated this season. Upon them and the riflemen, also unbeaten, rest the Navy's only hopes for intercollegiate championships this season.

Wrestlers, who defeated Pennsylvania varsity handily Saturday, will meet the matmen of Penn State here next Saturday and see a fair chance of closing their season with a victory. So far Navy wrestlers have won three matches and lost three.

Other events here on Saturday are a rifle match with Columbia and gymnastics between the Navy plebes and Temple freshmen.

Coast Ski Carnival Called; Too Much Rain

Los Angeles, Feb. 27 (AP).—The big ski carnival Los Angeles was going to hold today in the Coliseum, with five snow machines providing the surface, had to be postponed because of rain.

The promoters had lined up 41 of the world's best ski jumpers and estimated that their snow machines would create an 8-foot drift . . . the base, graduating up to a 4-inch covering at the takeoff.

Santa Anita Handicap Is Open Affair

Howard's Entry Loses Prestige; Pompoon Is Favored.

By Robert Myers.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Los Angeles, Feb. 27.—There was a slight cloud of doubt surrounding the popularity of Seabiscuit today as the running of the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap drew near.

Seabiscuit, the mighty, had been beaten—and the mighty must never fall.

Veteran turf experts viewed the 'Biscuit's chances in the big race differently following his photo-finish loss to J. A. Manfuso's Aneroid in the San Antonio Handicap Saturday.

C. S. Howard's Charger, they pointed out, was running his first race since last November, and a stranger was on his back in Jockey Sonny Workman, who neglected to use the whip.

The San Antonio was run at a mile and one-eighth, and many thought that Seabiscuit would have won at a mile and one-quarter, the distance of the $100,000 race.

Yet little Charlie Rosengarten put Aneroid out in front at the start, kept him there and had enough to hold off Seabiscuit's terrific bid down the stretch.

Whatever the divided opinion, it was agreed that Seabiscuit is no longer a prohibitive favorite to win the Santa Anita Handicap.

The ballyhoo heaped on Seabiscuit's head back-fired as far as the general public was concerned. It took $5 to win $2, and while the average fan snubbed that price, Seabiscuit's failure to win left them doubtful.

That's why it will be a horse race worthy of its rich purse next Saturday.

With Bill Bennings.

Dear Al, Selections at Hialeah Park.

The State of Rhode Island has revised its rules. Perhaps the most important change is Rule No. 73, a measure that I have advocated for Maryland tracks for a long time, to wit: Rule 73 states, "No director, officer, employe or any person acting in an official capacity shall enter, or cause to be entered, either directly or indirectly, any horse in which he or she has an interest, financial or otherwise—violators of this rule may be either suspended or ruled off." Rule 123 clarifies the issue that started the "war" which led to the removal of Walter O'Hara as head man at the Narragansett track. Here it is: "The placing judges shall occupy the placing judges' stand at the time the horses pass the winning post, and their duty shall be to place as many horses as they think proper in the order of their finish. They shall announce their decision immediately, unless they consider it advisable to consult a picture from the finish camera in use at the meeting. When the judges differ in their placing the majority shall prevail. Whenever the placing judges consider it advisable and request a picture from the finish camera to assist them in determining the positions of the horses finishing in the race, the placing judges shall not, until they have consulted the picture, post on the tote board any number or numbers of winning, place, show or fourth place horses. After consulting the picture, they shall place in the order of their finish the first four horses on the tote board as the official decision of the placing judges." BILL.

First race—Dark Sweet has worked well and appears as good as any of these maiden juveniles. King Joy is well bred and may be the one to cause the top fellow trouble. Friendly Paul to take care of the others.

Second race—Cosmic Ray has been passed along to me as one with a good chance of taking down the major honors in this sprint. Wall will do the piloting and I'm going to string along. Say When and Notice Me to take care of the remainder of the field.

Third race—Tutticurio, a winner earlier in the meeting, appears well placed in this field and may score again at sizable odds. Time Me and Evergold to account for the place and show awards.

—Fourth race—Flying Lee, a winner in the mud last out, should like the turf course and may make it two in a row. Birthday and Weekly Stipend appear capable of holding the others safe.

Fifth race—Javamocha and Midshipman seem to be the best of this group and both are at home at the route. I give the first named a slight edge. Motley to complete the money circle.

Sixth race—Teufel was in trouble in the stretch last out and may surprise this field. Longden will do the saddle work. Caballero 2nd and Columbiana for the other cash positions.

Seventh race—Indian Head has been improving gradually and fits snuggly in a field of this sort. Needs only the right handling. Steepletop and More Pep to chase the top selection to the wire.

Eighth race—Blind Brook and William V. appear destined to battle it out in the day's finale. Blue King is in light and could take it all.

Best bet—Teufel.

Armstrong's MondayBout Heads Week

Meets Burns in Overweigh Go; Buddy Baer Faces Barlund.

New York, Feb. 27 (AP).—Henry Armstrong, world's featherweight titleholder, busiest of all champions, headlines this week's national boxing program.

The 126-pound king, who stopped Everette Rightmire for his thirty-third knockout in 34 fights Friday night at Chicago, will meet Charles Burns, of Johnstown, Pa., in a ten-round over-the-weight affair Monday night at Minneapolis.

Also appearing on the program are a couple of promising heavyweights, Buddy Baer, of Livermore, Calif., and Gunnar Barlund, of Finland. They are scheduled for a ten-rounder at Madison Square Garden Friday night.

The program:

Dr. Saffold, 57, D. C. Specialist, Dies at Home

Veteran of War Medical Service Had Been Ill Several Months.

Dr. Guy Stark Saffold, 57, prominent ear, nose and throat specialist, and veteran of the World War medical service, died yesterday at his home, 9127 Thornhill road, Silver Spring, Md. He had been ill several months.

Dr. Saffold had practiced in Washington and Maryland more than 30 years. A native of Montgomery County, he was graduated from George Washington University medical school in 1904. He became associated with Dr. J. J. Richardson and later went abroad for postgraduate study in London, Berlin and Vienna.

In recent years Dr. Saffold had been a member of the staff at the Episcopal Hospital. He conducted private practice, with offices at 1726 I street northwest.

During the World War Dr. Saffold held commission as captain in the Army Medical Corps. He served in France at an A. E. F. evacuation hospital from August, 1918, to April, 1919.

An enthusiastic golfer, Dr. Saffold was a member of the Washington Golf and Country Club, the Congressional and Columbia Country clubs. He also was a member of the District and other medical societies.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Lenore Reach Saffold; three children, Guy Stark Saffold, jr., Rosemary and Virginia Reach Saffold, of Silver Spring; a brother, Ray Phillips Saffold, El Paso, Tex., and a sister, Mrs. H. F. Sommers, of Hongkong.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed last night, but the burial will be in Arlington Cemetery. Honorary pall-bearers will be Karl R. Lesh, Dr. A. W. Valentine, Dr. J. Russell Verbrycke, jr., Dr. F. X. McGovern, Dr. Harry F. Anderson, Dr. J. C. Bradley, Dr. B. L. Jarman, Richard Engel, and W. Parker Jones.

Ernest C. Gibson, U.S. Employe, Dies

Ernest C. Gibson, of 15 Ross street, Cottage City, Md., died early yesterday at his home. He was 63.

A lifelong resident of Washington, Mr. Gibson had been a proofreader at the Government Printing Office for 25 years. He belonged to the Columbia Typographical Union and was a Mason.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Catherine Gibson, and two brothers, Dr. Robert Gibson, of Sparta, Ill., and John Gibson, of Washington.

Services will be held tomorrow at 1:45 p. m. at Hines funeral home and at 2:30 p. m. in St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Bladensburg, Md.

Corinna Loring's Father Succumbs

George Arthur Loring, of Mount Rainier, Md., died yesterday at Hagerstown, Md. He was father of Corinna Loring, mysteriously murdered in November, 1935.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Frances G. Loring; a son, Frank Loring, and a daughter, Mrs. Florence L. Jacono.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the Ernest F. Gasch funeral home, Hyattsville, Md.

House Painter Does Portraits

Carl Nyquist, who paints houses half the year so he can afford his hobby of portrait painting. His first exhibition opens today in the Public Library.

Painting Houses Half the Year Finances Artist Rest of Time

When Carl Nyquist says he's a painter, he means it.

Nyquist is a small, quiet, white-haired man, Swedish by birth, who paints houses six months of the year so that he can afford his hobby, which is painting pictures. This is his picture?painting season, and it has been a highly successful one. His first exhibition opens today at the Public Library.

He shares a studio-apartment at 1714 Pennsylvania avenue northwest with Howard Swenson, who works on the local WPA art project. He'll work there with his oils and canvas until the spring house-painting season opens. Then he'll go out and paint enough houses so that he can support himself through the summer picture-painting season.

"Someday maybe I'll earn enough so I won't have to paint any more houses," he said yesterday.

Nyquist came over from Sweden as a youth and settled in Chicago. That was in 1905. He painted houses until the war broke out, then enlisted in the artillery division, went to France and returned to Chicago in 1919.

He has liked to draw pictures ever since he can remember, but it wasn't until he came back from France that he decided to take his talent seriously. For three successive years he managed to earn enough so that he could lay off work during the winter and study at the Chicago Art Institute. One year he won a $50 prize with one of his oils.

By that time his avocation had become more important to him than his vocation. He got to thinking about Paris art schools, and painted houses with renewed energy. In 1926 he left for France with $2,000 in his pocket. Two years later he returned, part of the $2,000 still in his pocket, after a study-tour which included Paris, the Riviera, Italy, Germany, Corsica, Denmark and Sweden.

Corsica impressed him most of all. "It's a fairyland," he says. He remembers it so vividly that he still is painting pictures of it. He did his first water colors there.

The depression nearly did away with both his art and his livelihood. With no houses to paint, there could be no studio, no brushes, no canvas. But there were always paper and pencil. He whiled away the days in a New York flop house by sketching his fellow residents.

He sketched them as they slept, chatted, smoked and read newspapers. It was easy when they slept, because no matter how uncomfortable the chairs were they would sleep for hours once they started. He made over 1,000 rapid sketches of depression figures, some of which will be exhibited here.

House-painting began to pick up after Nyquist had been unemployed for two years. But meanwhile his interest in art had lagged. It was not until last fall, after a five-year lapse, that he invested in more canvas and oils and started in again.

His art, so far, is strictly non-profit making. He has sold only one picture and sees little prospect of selling any more. "I price them at from $35 to $50," he said. "I know it's high, but I don't give a darn. That one over there I like so well that I'm asking $100 for it. I don't want to part with it and I guess I'll never have to!"

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

The Wrong Information.

It goes without saying that the more information one partner can give the other the better is their combined chance to reach the proper contract. But this is not the whole story. There is information and information! Since the number of bids that either partner can have on a given hand is necessarily limited, it is vital to discriminate among the facts that can be expressed. In today's hand North thought that he was transmitting an accurate picture of his own holding, but he left out the most vital feature.

The six club contract would have been made if South had been able to guess the club situation. Not being second-sighted, declarer laid down the ace and then the queen, with the reasonable hope that he could capture the club ten either on the second or third round of the suit. Unfortunately the adverse distribution made this impossible, and the contract was down one. But even if the small slam in clubs had been fulfilled the contract still would have been a very bad one in comparison to what it should have been.

North's bidding had made it impossible to reach the correct contract, namely, hearts. He had bid two hearts over South's one club and, while this was quite justified, despite his club void, because of his tremendous strength, he could certainly not expect his partner to realize that he had made this jump takeout and his later four notrump bid without a single club. South's extreme club length certainly made it appear that no support in the suit would be required. But "no support" is one thing, and a void quite another.

If North had done as he obviously should have done, namely, rebid his excellent heart suit, the partnership might well have reached the lay-down grand slam in hearts. The bidding should have been:

South	North
1 ♣	2 ♡
3 ♣	3 ♡
4 ♡	7 ♡

After North gets even delayed heart support from South, 13 tricks appear an overwhelming probability, and there is no need to fool around with spades or notrump.

South, dealer.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	2 ♡	Pass

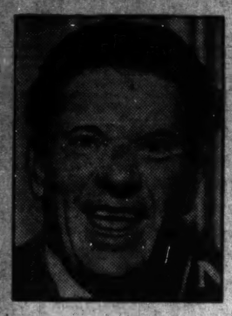
Bob Burns Says—



The other night, a Shakespearean actress came into a restaurant and she acted so haughty and talked in such an affected voice that some of the people took a dislike to her. They couldn't understand why anybody would want to see her in a play. So I told 'em what a wonderful actress she was.

I says, "When she plays 'Aida, she starves in a prison cell; when she plays 'Rigoletto,' she's murdered and dragged away in a bag and when she sings 'Ophelia' in Hamlet, she's drowned in a brook. And," I says, "she makes you believe it!"

Grandpa Snazzy says, "Well, I'd pay to see that myself."

Capital Friends Bid Farewell To MacWhite

Washington friends last night said an affectionate farewell to Irish Minister Michael MacWhite, and there was no blarney in it, either.

As Eire's new flag waved from a Willard Hotel flagstaff, 600 men and women gathered at a reception in the ballroom to bid a Godspeed to the Stalwart Irish diplomat and his Danish-born wife, who today at noon start on their journey for a new post in Rome.

In a city which watches foreign envoys come and go without much excitement, the tribute to the Gael of Glandore, as he is known in the old country, was an extraordinary, if not an unprecedented, event in Washington's social and diplomatic history. At times—particularly when George O'Connor and his Troubadors went into action—it sounded like a rehearsal for St. Patrick's Day.

Praised by Roper.

Secretary of Commerce Daniel Calhoun Roper, boasting that he had a great-great-great grandfather who was an Irishman, and drawing on that distant ancestor for eloquence, added the tribute of the Roosevelt Administration to the others that piled up around the blushing MacWhite.

"Mr. Minister," he said, "you take with you from the Administration our unadulterated affection. Nothing is more needed in the world today; tormented as it is with fears, than the beautiful wit and sentiment of the Irish.

"Thank you for your services to this country, and we guarantee to underwrite the services to the countries to which you may go."

"I never have hated an Irishman, Roper said, echoing a remark of his father.

Roper, earlier, had said that MacWhite, in his travels, might be not alone the Irish Minister but an "Ambassador of Good Will for the United States" as well.

MacWhite Answers.

"Mr. Secretary," said MacWhite when his turn came to talk, "how could it be otherwise?

"I believe no foreign diplomat has received more kindness, more sympathetic consideration and deeper evidences of friendship in America than I, the representative of Ireland, have received in the past nine years."

MacWhite said that in the Gaelic tongue, America is sometimes called "Greater Ireland."

A traveler in 46 States since he first came to the United States in 1917 as an officer in the French Foreign Legion to help the Liberty bond drive, MacWhite said he never had felt like a stranger, and he enforced the remark with a story about the Irish immigrant who settled among the Dutch in Pennsylvania. A storekeeper, who, despite the fact that an ancestor fought in the Revolution, had trouble in sounding his w's, saw a storm coming and remarked it to the newly arrived Irishman, saying it looked like "bad veather."

Calvert Club Is Host.

"By what right," said the Irishman, as quoted by MacWhite, "has a foreigner like you to be making observations on our American weather."

The farewell testimonial reception was given to Minister and Mrs. MacWhite by the Calvert Club of Washington, made up of Catholic business and professional men, and headed by James E. Colliflower. A dinner for the diplomat and his wife prereded the oratory and reception in the ballroom.

In the crowd that gathered for that were Senators and Representatives, members of the judiciary, the Army and the Navy, high-ranking clergymen, members of the Irish War Veterans and the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and the Ladies Auxiliary, with their chaplain, the Rev. Timothy N. MacCarthy.

Ireland Draws Praise.

"The happy relations that exist between our country and Ireland," Colliflower told MacWhite, "are due to many factors, but no man has done more to perfect them than you."

Associate Justice Harold M. Stephens, of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, praised Ireland's contribution to American democracy. The Irishman, he said, has a strong capacity for resisting wrong and oppression, but also a strong capacity for submission to the right.

Senator Frank Maloney, of Connecticut, said the departure of Minister and Mrs. MacWhite left Washington poorer, and a letter was read from Senator Augustine Lonergan, of the same State, which expressed the same sentiment. Colliflower read other letters from Associate Justice Pierce Butler, Postmaster General Farley, Attorney General Cummings, and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

G. O. P. Leaders Favor Athletic Clubs of Boys

Social Appeal Must Be Made to Those Under Age 24, Party Is Told.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Removal of divisional barriers in the party and formation of social and athletic programs to stimulate the interest of youth were recommended informally by several national Young Republican leaders today.

Views of the junior Republicans were expressed at a meeting preliminary to a two-day session starting tomorrow of the Republican Party's program committee led by Dr. Glenn Frank.

Henry A. Bubb, of Topeka, Kans., chairman of the National Young Republican Federation, who called today's meeting, told the gathering:

"I believe that the reactionary days are gone. It seems to me it is time that we as a group stopped attacking older Republicans and concentrated on fighting the New Deal Party."

Youth Is Great Problem.

Declaring that "we can't win in 1940 with nothing," Bubb continued, "our great problem is with those under 24 years old. We've got to find some way to reach them. We must form youth clubs, more or less for social entertainment.

"What we need is something we can stand on, something to sell the country. We've got to sell a leader—and, in my opinion, that leader must be a Moses. In no other way can we win back the two groups we have lost—youth and the great percentage of the working men on a salary."

Hamilton to Speak.

Tomorrow's sessions of the program committee, created in December at St. Louis by the executive committee of the Republican National Committee, will be addressed by Dr. Frank and John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the national committee.

Dr. Frank's policy and advisory committee, meeting for the first time since its inception, was expected to determine this week whether it would submit an interim report and recommendation for party action prior to the Congressional elections next fall.

James M. Tucker, Indiana chairman, another speaker at today's meeting, directed some of his remarks against his own group, saying:

"You can collect more deadheads in the Young Republican Organization than you ever saw before. Young Republicans often complain they are not recognized. When Young Republicans get out and do something they will be recognized, and not until then."

A. Allston Clarke, head of the Young G. O. P. in Rhode Island and treasurer of the New England Council, said that "our technique of tearing down the policy of the New Deal proved a failure" in the last elecetion and suggested that "we should take the attitude today that we are elected and go ahead and do the needed job, each in his own community."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Grace Moore, assisted by Samuel Carmell, violinist and Isaac van Grove, pianist, in Constitution Hall Sunday afternoon.

Returning after an absence of two years, Grace Moore was welcomed yesterday afternoon in Constitution Hall by a large audience which manifested cordiality in the vigor and volume of applause. By the index of attendance, however, one would surmise that the singer's popularity has slightly waned since her last appearance here, for there was no overflow of admirers unable to obtain seats other than on the stage. This is an unaccountable fluctuation in the tide of approval, for Miss Moore is actually singing better this season than when she gave her previous recital.

She is using her voice with more discretion and with an evident intent to improve its lyric quality and to economize in its sonority. There was more emphasis upon delicacies of tone and less upon the display of resonance. One noted a greater plasticity in phrasing and an increased skill in control, although she still has the fault of breaking a phrase for breath in an extended passage. She has yet to acquire that freedom from self-consciousness, that complete identification with the song, which would allow her to make the most of her capabilities.

Her choice of an opening aria, "L'amero, saro costante," from Mozart's "Il Re Pastore," was unfortunate in that her idea of Mozart's style varies from the classical norm. She was more at home in Lia's aria from "L'Enfant Prodigue" with its less exacting proportions of phrase and in the familiar flamboyancies of "Un bel di' vedremo" from "Madama Butterfly."

In her quest for lyrical amelioration, Miss Moore has discovered Debussy—"Fantoches" and "La Mort des Amants"—and Delius—"Indian Love Song." The remainder of her program consisted of Koshetz' arrangement of an Arenski waltz, Bridge's "O That It Were So," Hageman's "The Little Dancers," Clutsam's "My Curly Headed Baby" and Carpenter's "Serenade." Isaac van Grove accompanied with finesse and tact.

"Miss Moore's assisting artist, Samuel Carmell, is a young violinist with a good technical equipment who needs to watch his intonation more carefully. It was frequently just enough off pitch to be an exasperation to a fine ear. His contributions to the program were routine selections: the andante from Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole," the last two movements from the Mendelssohn concerto and two Kreisler transcriptions.

Dealers Finance National Ads to Sell Used Cars

Plan to Spend $1,250,000 in March Drive to Clear Clogged Market.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Feb. 7.—A $1,250,000 advertising and promotional campaign designed to start a volume movement of the accumulation of second-hand automobiles now in dealers' hands was announced today by Alvan Macauley, speaking for the motorcar industry and its 46,000 dealers.

Macauley is president of the Automobile Manufacturers' Association, whose membership includes every automobile and truck manufacturer excepting the Ford Motor Co. The Ford company, however, has joined in the move to stimulate large-scale disposal of used-car stocks.

Designating the period of March 5 to 12 as "national used-car exchange week," the automobile manufacturers plan to spend the $1,250,000 in newspaper, radio and billboard advertising of used-car values and the exchange of mechanically obsolete cars for "newer" used vehicles.

Estimates of the number of used cars now in dealers' hands range as high as 800,000, although there has been a noticeable easing of the jam in the last few weeks. Leading manufacturers have asserted that until the used-car accumulation can be reduced it would be impossible for dealers to handle a normal volume of new-car business.

Besides reducing used-car stocks, which the manufacturers assert would be reflected almost immediately in a substantial increase in factory activity and employment, the drive is expected to eliminate many obsolete and unsafe vehicles now in operation.
